Glass Gets Point In Fight to Delay Vote on Bank Bill

Sub-Committee Agrees to Separate Action on Insurance Law.

Extension Advised To Run for Year

Fletcher Will Oppose Move and Advocate Only 3 Months.

By Robert C. Albright.

Extension of the present plan of insurance of bank deposits for one year beyond the July 1 expiration date was agreed to yesterday by the Senate Banking sub-committee.

This would continue full insurance of bank deposits, up to $5,000, until June 30, 1936, unless the Eccles bank bill is enacted before that date.

Although it is a major victory for Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, sub-committee chairman, members of the sub-committee insist the decision need not necessarily jeopardize the Eccles bill, carrying revision of the insurance deposit law along with increased Federal Reserve Board control over currency and credit.

The immediate effect of the joint resolution, if enacted by both houses before the Sunday night deadline, will be to allay fears of bankers that the burdensome provisions of the permanent bank deposit insurance plan would automatically go into effect July 1, it was said.

Some Opposition Possible.

The joint resolution nevertheless may head into some opposition in the full Senate Banking Committee this morning when the sub-committee makes its report.

Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, chairman of the full committee, who has advocated enactment of the Eccles bill intact, without any segregation of its provisions, may attempt to block the deposit insurance resolution unless it is revised.

"If I can prevent it," he said last night, "I am not going to permit any step that might ultimately mean the Eccles bill will fail of enactment this session."

Senator Fletcher, it was learned may attempt to amend the resolution in committee so it will provide for extension of the present deposit insurance plan for only three months.

This, if successful, might have the effect of compelling action on the Eccles bill, its credit and banking as well as deposit insurance features, this session.

A further effort to modify the joint resolution was indicated in the House, which is predominantly friendly to the Eccles bill. Should the House materially shorten the insurance extension period, it might force a conference agreement on a less-than-one-year extension. On the other hand, this might lead to a controversy that could well last beyond June 30.

Shorter Extension Discussed.

Although a three-month extension was discussed in the Glass subcommittee, it was brought out that a one-year extension would give more leeway for the working out of permanent banking legislation.

If an understanding can be reached on the Eccles measure in the meantime, it was pointed out, the Eccles bill can be passed and its insurance deposit features substituted for temporary provisions of the one-year resolution.

Senator Glass is said to take the position that the full Eccles bill obviously can not be enacted by Sunday; that a one-year extension of the present temporary deposit insurance plan will provide needed time to work out details of the more comprehensive bank legislation.

The Virginian opposed the confirmation of Marriner S. Eccles, governor of the Federal Reserve Board, because of his former banking connections. During the months Gov. Eccles' bill has been before his sub-committee, he has fought consistently for defeat or moderation of Title 2, centralizing Federal control over banking and credit.

Action of the sub-committee yesterday was viwed as giving him a definite advantage in his efforts toward full and complete committee

Selassie Sees Moslem Help For Ethiopia

Religious War in Prospect as Menace of Uprising Grows.

The Situation Abroad.

Threats of a Moslem uprising against Italy in event she declares war on Ethiopia were reported from French Somaliland. In Rome, Mussolini continued preparations for a decisive campaign in East Africa.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Djibouti, French Somaliland, June 24.—The growing menace of a general Moslem uprising if Italy declares war on Abyssinia was partially confirmed tonight in an exclusive interview granted at Addis Ababa, Abyssinian capital, by Emperor Haile Selassie I.

The rumors of such a fanatical religious war, with the Moslems coming to the aid of the Christian State of Abyssinia, have been whispered in Djibouti and other Moslem ports on the Red Sea and Mediterranean for weeks.

Jean Perrigault, United Press special correspondent, went directly to the Emperor in Addis Ababa, and asked for his attitude on the matter. He repeated rumors among natives of an Islamic uprising throughout the Moslem world in the Near East and Africa unless Great Britain, France and other powers prevent Rome declaring war on Abyssinia.

Koran Is Quoted.

The emperor, Perrigault said, replied:

"Mohammed declared in the Koran (Moslem bible): 'The Ethiopians having given me their hospitality, all Mohammedans must aid the Ethiopians if they encounter difficulties.'

"For the time being, the Moslems and Ethiopians are happy and live in peace and religious liberty."

Emperor Haile Selassie, replying to a question whether Abyssinia would receive material aid from neighboring moslems if Italy declares war, said:

"That is merely hypothesis. We have solicited nothing. We enjoy good relations with Yemen and the Hedjaz (on the Arabian peninsula). And the Christians of Egypt have

Flames Kill 19 in Crash Of 2 Planes

Gardel, South American Film Star, and His Party Victims.

Samper, Pilot Known in U. S., Among Dead in Colombian Tragedy.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Olaya Herrera Airport, Medellin, Colombia, June 24.—Nearly a score of persons, including an American, were killed or burned to death in one of the worst aviation tragedies in recent years which occurred when two passenger ships collided in taking off here today.

The dead totaled 19, latest check by officials tonight of bodies from the charred, twisted ruins of the big planes showed.

The American was Henry Swartz, 36, manager of the Universal Film Co. branch in Colombia. A Philadelphian, he had been married in Venezuela.

The body of a small girl was among the victims retrieved from the still-smouldering machines by rescue workers, who were held off two hours by the terrific heat of the flames.

Two Persons Saved.

Two persons were saved, but hospital attendants said they were so badly burned they may lose their sight.

Other known victims included Carlos Gardel, Argentine stage and screen star, and Ernesto Samper, director of the Saco (Sociedad de Aviacion Colombiana) passenger plane, which crashed with another commercial ship of the Scadta (Scoiedad Colombo-Alemana de Transportes Aereos) Lines.

The ships were taking off when a gust of wind threw them out of control and the collision occurred. They burst into flames immediately, the fire shooting high into the air and keeping firemen and rescue workers 60 feet from the inferno.

Other identified victims in the Saco plane besides Swartz, Gardel and Samper were:

Willis Foster, mechanic; Alfredo Lopera, Guillermo de Barbieri, Angel de Riveral, Jose Moreno and Celedonnio Palacios, all Argentinians.

Scadta Plane Victims.

Identified victims of the Scadta plane were:

Pilot Hans Ulrich Thom, a German; H. Fuerst Alemanes, radio operator; J. Castillo, steward; passengers Estanislao Zuleta Ferrer, Jorge Moreno, Guillermo Escobar Velez, all Colombians, and Lester W. Strauss, nationality undetermined.

A statement issued by the Scadta Co. attributed the crash to a "serious violation of fundamental flying regulations by the Saco pilot." The statement said that when the trimotor Saco plane left the south runway, which is the main one at the airdrome, the wind was at its rear, forcing it off the runway into collision with the Scadta plane, which was beside the runway awaiting its turn to take off for Bogota.

It was also claimed that four days ago under similar conditions a Saco plane barely escaped crashing into a fence. Scadta officials said they would ask the Aviation Department to make an immediate investigation, reserving the right to make claims against those responsible.

The crash took place shortly after noon. Spectators crowding the airport to bid farewell to Gardel, who was on a tour of Colombia, saw the difficulties Samper had in handling the plane, but there was no indication of the crash which followed almost immediately.

Heavy winds made management of the plane almost impossible and it suddenly veered to the side and collided with the Scadta machine. Flames enveloped the two planes, destroying them.

The airport quickly filled with people. A guard of soldiers was thrown around the field to keep away the growing crowd, estimated at more than 50,000.

New York, June 24 (AP).—Ernesto Samper, South American airman who was killed piloting a passenger plane near Bogota, Colombia today, was well known at Roosevelt Field, where he was regarded as an excellent pilot.

He left Roosevelt Field only a

Blanton's Amendment Is Called Death Blow to Measure.

Bill as Passed by House Conceded Little Hope in the Senate.

By James D. Secrest.

The tangled District airport legislation, which has been before Congress nine years, became further ensnared yesterday as the House passed a sub-committee measure setting up a commission to select a site with an amendment saddling the entire cost of the project on the District government.

The amendment was offered by Representative Thomas L. Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, and indorsed by other members of the Texas delegation, which on Friday obtained a Federal subsidy of $3,000,000 for the Texas State exposition.

While even the bill as drafted by the House sub-committee was conceded slight chance of passage in the Senate, the Blanton amendment was characterized as the killing blow even by members of the sub-committee.

Under the bill, as approved by the House District Committee, the Federal Government would have advanced $2,500,000 to finance construction of the District airport and would have paid half the cost of operation. After ten years the District would have been required to repay half the Federal appropriation in four installments with interest at 3 per cent.

Parliamentary Maneuver.

Blanton's amendment was pushed through on a parliamentary maneuver that caught the District subcommittee off its guard. Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who had taken the lead in sponsoring the commission bill, failed to understand, until too late, that the amendment was adopted as an amendment to the committee amendment in the committee of the whole and consequently could not be voted on separately in the House in open session.

A few inutes before the committee arose; Nichols announced that he would demand a roll call vote on Blanton's amendment and defeat it. His prediction came as a climax to an impassioned plea for an adequate airport for the National Capital and a 50-50 contribution by the Federal Government.

The House also adopted a committee amendment, sponsored by Chairman Mary T. Norton, enlarging the commission designated to select the airport site from seven to nine members by adding representatives of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Washington Board of Trade.

Compromise Proposal.

This amendment was accepted by the sub-committee as a compromise after Mrs. Norton agreed to withdraw a former proposal that the two agencies replace Amelia Earhart Putnam and a representative of the air transport lines.

Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, waged a persistent but futile fight against the bill and for several restrictive amendments. Smith for years has sponsored a Gravelly Point bill, which the sub-committee rejected with emphatic denunciation of the proposed site.

The revised bill now goes to the Senate, where a Gravelly Point measure is pending before the Senate District Committee, with the likelihood that it will not emerge this session of Congress.

Local aviation enthusiasts, however, immediately began working

Robinson Tells Reporters of Tax Program

Attempt to Jam Through Proposals Is Agreed Upon at Parley.

Doubt Is Expressed On Move's Success

Rider on Resolution for Excise Levy Weighed to Effect Plan.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

In apparently the boldest move yet to come from the New Deal, President Roosevelt and congressional leaders last night agreed to make an attempt to jam through to passage the President's share-the-wealth tax program in the next five days.

It was decided that Chairman Pat Harrison of the Finance Committee should have that group consider attaching the President's proposals for increased taxes on large incomes, inheritance taxes on large bequests and establishment of graduated corporation income taxes to the pending joint resolution which extends for one year the nuisance or excise taxes expiring Sunday.

Thus an effort will be made to have the President's tax program, which has not yet been reduced to detailed figures, enacted into law between now and Sunday. Otherwise under the plan adopted at the White House excise taxes which produce $500,000,000 annually for the Treasury would automatically expire.

Some Doubt Expressed.

Whether this can be done was regarded as doubtful in many quarters last night, but nevertheless, if the statement made by Senate Democratic Leader Joe Robinson is correctly understood, at least an attempt toward this end will be made.

Adoption of the President's tax program in so limited a period would make impossible the holding of any hearings or any lengthy discussion of the measure either in the Senate Finance Committee or on the Senate floor, much less in the House, which would have to accept the amended joint resolution. Under the Constitution, revenue measures must originate in the House, but this requirement is expected to be satisfied by using the joint resolution already adopted by the House as a legislative vehicle.

So surprising and breath taking was this proposal to rush to enactment within five days a tax program about which the country has no knowledge except along broad general lines that its announcement bewildered observers. The only plausible justification put forward for such action was that the President wished to demonstrate his sincerity in proposing his share-the-wealth tax program Wednesday.

It was reported that in case the procedure decided on last night encounters difficulties, a new joint resolution would be originated in the House to extend the nuisance taxes from 30 to 90 days to prevent their expiration Sunday midnight and until the broader plan can be enacted. This report added to the bewilderment.

Doughton Differs.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee, one of those at the White House, however, said he knew nothing of such a proposal and that it was his understanding that an effort would be made to have the pending joint resolution, with the President's program attached, enacted this week.

"It is up to the Senate, as I understand it," asserted Doughton. "If the Senate does not act by Sunday I suppose the nuisance taxes will have to lapse."

The plan to act at once on the President's tax plan was revealed by Senator Robinson on leaving the White House early last night after a conference of 2 hours and 35 minutes with the President.

"At the conference attended by the Vice President, Speaker Byrns, Chairman Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee, Chairman Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee and Senator Robinson," the latter said, dictating to a large group of the press, "it was decided

Bill Proposing Subway Study Set for House

$25,000 Allowed for Survey Here; Feasibility Costs Are Chief Factors.

Washington's dream of a subway, to relieve rush-hour traffic congestion, assumed the first definite form yesterday as Chairman Mary T. Norton of the House District Committee announced she will introduce a bill today authorizing a thorough study of the proposal.

The measure, drafted by People's Counsel William A. Roberts, authorizes the District Commissioners to make a survey "as to the feasibility and cost" of a subway system for the District.

The survey "shall embrace a study as to the appropriate location, size and design of a subway system or systems, estimates as to the cost and time of construction, and recommendations as to the feasibility of the construction of such a system and the operation thereof by private and governmental agencies."

Report by 1937.

Should the bill be passed by Congress, the District Commissioners would be directed to file a report not later than January 1, 1937, together with detailed estimates and preliminary plans.

An authorized appropriation of $25,000 is carried, to be charged equally against the Federal and District governments, and provision is made that annual appropriations can be made as requested by the Commissioners to continue the study.

In sending the bill to Mrs. Norton, the people's counsel said:

"After nearly 15 years of study of the District of Columbia transportation and public utility problems, I have reached the definite conviction that a subway system

Government's Revenue Gains Despite Sagging in Industry

Federal Reserve's Report Shows Drop in May Production to 85 From January's 90 While Treasury's Income Climbs in All Branches.

By Felix Bruner.

While the Federal Reserve report yesterday showed that industrial production had declined slightly in May for the fourth consecutive month, Treasury figures indicated that the Government's income for the fiscal year ending June 30 would be considerably above last year.

The volume of industrial production declined from 86 per cent of the 1923-25 average in April to 85 per cent in May, the report stated. This was a drop from the high mark of 90 registered in January. At the same time, activity in residential construction continued above the level of a year ago.

Steel production showed a seasonal decline in May and the first three weeks in June. In the automobile industry, where output this spring has been substantially higher than in recent years, production showed a marked decline in May, reflecting in part the effects of a strike.

Seasonal Trend Reversed.

There was little change reported in cotton textile production, while woolen mills showed a small increase, contrary to seasonal trends. Production of coal showed a marked increase in May and the early part of June, probably reflecting activities of producers in increasing stocks in view of a possible labor strike. None of these figures reflected to any great extent the results of the Supreme Court decision of May 27 outlawing NRA codes.

Factory employment and pay rolls declined between the middle of April and the middle of May, the report showed. Employment declined in the automobile, radio, lumber, clothing, cotton, silk and shoe industries, while at woolen mills employment increased and in many other lines little change was reported.

Farm Conditions Better.

The board reported that construction contracts awarded, as compiled by the F. W. Dodge Corporation, were about the same in May as in April. While the level of residential construction was above that of a year ago, the level of public construction was lower.

"Department of Agriculture estimates based on June 1 reports," the board statement said, "indicate that conditions for wheat, oats, barley, rye, hay and pastures were at the 10-year average for 1923-32, in contrast to conditions a year ago, which

Senate Passes Billion Dollar Farm-Aid Bill

Sharecroppers Enabled to Buy Own Land With Federal Loans.

Over protests that the Government is entering the "landlord business," the Senate yesterday passed the $1,000,000,000 Bankhead farm tenant bill, extending aid to farmers, share croppers and farm laborers.

The vote was 45 to 32. It followed a prolonged fight on the measure by conservative Democrats and Republicans, who weeks ago sent the bill back to committee for complete revision. Only slightly modified, it now goes to the House for action.

The bill sets up a farmers home corporation, with a mandatory capital stock of $50,000,000, to be subscribed by the President from the $4,000,000,000 work-relief fund.

Tenants May Buy Own Farms.

Ultimately, the corporation may issue a total of $1,000,000,000 in fully guaranteed Government bonds. Under modifications ordered by the Agriculture Committee, however, none of the bonds may be issued the first year, and only $300,000,000 in three years.

With these funds, the corporation is authorized "to enter into contracts, make loans or grants, or both," and to acquire, by purchase or otherwise, real or personal property, which it may develop, maintain, sell or lease.

Tenants, sharecroppers and others not only may buy farms from the corporation, but may borrow funds for farm improvements and pur-

Catastrophe Menaces Colony In Alaska, Vandenberg Warns

Senator Cites Tales of Distress Among 2,000 Settlers and Demands Their Return to U. S.; Relief Officials Say Pioneers Are Contented.

By the Associated Press.

Attacking the Alaskan colonization scheme of the Relief Administration as a "crazy adventure," Senator Vandenberg (Republican), predicted in the Senate yesterday that unless prompt remedies are taken the enterprise will result in a "major catastrophe."

The Michigan Senator, his voice harsh, arose during the debate on the Bankhead farm tenant bill to declare the whole Alaskan colonization program was "an utterly untenable and ridiculous proposition."

He called it an attempted "complete commune under the American flag."

His renewed criticism of the measure was prompted by statements of Relief Administration workmen returning to Seattle from the Matanuska Valley in Alaska telling stories of distress among the 2,000 settlers on the pioneering project.

Defending the settlement, Anthony J. Dimond, Alaska Territorial Delegate, said in an interview:

"I suspect that some of the settlers are just beginning to realize that their venture was not a lark, now that the glamour of adventure in a new land has worn off."

Relief officials said, meanwhile, that Harry L. Hopkins' report on the project, requested by the Senate, would be sent to the Capitol today. Although they declined to comment on Vandenberg's asseertions, they insisted that not more than 10 per cent of the single men—some of whom have returned to the United States, were dissatisfied.

In the Senate, Vandenberg said the workers had described the site of the settlement as a "dusty, mosquito infested country," instead of a "promised land."

Citing this and other news dispatches as basis for his statement, Vandenberg declared:

"If something is not done very promptly to restore these people to the continental United States, or at least to civilization, there will be a major tragedy and a major calamity under the aegis of this amazing governmental experiment."

Anchorage, Alaska, June 24.—Four hundred Anchorage residents joined in an excursion to Palmer, headquarters for the Matanuska colonists yesterday and found little discontent among the settlers.

Fire Sweeps Florida Yachts, Causing Loss of $1,500,000

By the United Press.

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., June 24.—One man was killed in a raging, gasoline-fed fire that destroyed an estimated $1,500,000 worth of palatial yachts at Pilkington's storage basin near here this afternoon.

Capt. R. C. Abel, of West Palm Beach, was burned to death when a gasoline tank near which he was standing exploded aboard the stored yatch Seminole, throwing flames over craft nearby. Abel was master of the Seminole.

Abel's engineer, John Thomas, will live, although he was thrown from the Seminole out into New River, which flows by the stricken yacht basin.

Thomas, covered with burning gasoline, was rushed to a hospital in downtown Fort Lauderdale.

More than 70 luxurious craft were stored in the yacht basin owned by Capt. R. C. Pilkington. More than half of them were destroyed and all others were damaged severely. Pilkington's establishment is 5 miles west of here, away from fire fighting equipment.

Capt. Pilkington's basin is the largest fresh water storage place in the United States. Many millionaire winter residents of southern Florida had stored their craft there for the summer. Pilkington's basin was popular because it was on fresh water, which is deadly to tiny sea worms that bore through wooden hulls and rot them in sea water. Craft placed there were out of danger from the worms.

The storage shed was a 350-foot long affair built of concrete pilings with a corrugated iron roof. Explosions ripped the roof to pieces as flame licked gasoline tanks.

Steel-hulled craft were warped and melted by the heat of the fire.

Roosevelt's Son to Wield Pick On TVA Project Without Pay

By the Associated Press.

A payless job swinging a pick and ax in the Government's Tennessee Valley undertaking yesterday was chosen by President and Mrs. Roosevelt for their youngest son, John's, summer vacation.

But there were indications the lanky youngster's thoughts may stray occasionally from Tennessee to far-away Africa. For as the White House disclosed John's summer plans, word came from Beverly Mass., that the hunting horse of Miss Louise Barbour, daughter of a Harvard professor, was being shipped to Hyde Park, N. Y., while she accompanies her father, Prof. Thomas H. Barbour, on an exploration trip to the Dark Continent.

John is an expert rider and member of the Harvard freshman polo team. He has several times been a week-end guest at the home of Miss Barbour.

The Tennessee Valley experiment is the pride of the President and so is John. Mr. Roosevelt stipulated to the youth that he work without pay so that he does no deprive anyone else of a paying job.

Roosevelt Sets Method to Let Work Projects

Executive Order Outlines Manner of Handling Construction.

Removing one of the last remaining obstacles to the actual operation of the works program, President Roosevelt last night issued an executive order outlining in detail the manner in which construction contracts may be awarded and the work supervised.

The President specified that all projects must be conducted under one of four methods—force account, fixed price contract, limited price contract and management contract. On each job no less than 90 per cent of the workers must come from relief rolls.

The force account method involves employment of labor and supervision of work by the Government department or agency or by the local unit of Government constructing the project. The fixed price contract calls for awards based on competitive bidding involving payment to the contractor of a fixed sum.

Awards Based On Bids.

The limited price contract provides for awards based on competitive bidding, to include everything but labor employed at the site and the cost of such materials as may be supplied by the Government. The management contract contemplates only supervision and management by the contractor. In connection with the last two types of contracts labor will be paid the subsistence wages previously fixed by the President.

Meanwhile, it was indicated that as a result of operation of the works program, direct relief is expected to begin tapering off in July.

The works allotment advisory board, meeting at the White House, recommended that $115,000,000 be allotted to the FERA for next month. This is a reduction of $25,000,000 under the sum allotted for June

While no one, other than administrative employes, has been put to work under the new program, officials have predicted that a considerable number would be employed before the end of July and the action of the allotment board bore out this prediction. The first activity is expected to be transfer of considerable of the present work relief under FERA to the new works program.

Nearing Limit Set.

Thus far the FERA has been allotted a total of $555,000,000 from the $4,880,000,000 appropriation. It was expected at the time the bill was passed that $880,000,000 would be needed to conduct direct relief activities until the goal of putting 3,500,000 persons to work is reached.

The allotment for April was $150,000,000; for May, $140,000,000, and for June, $140,000,000. While there usually is a decline in expenditures during midsummer, the reduction is not as great as that indicated by the $115,000,000 allotment. Expenditures last July were $151,000,000.

Funds Allotted.

Allocations recommended by the board yesterday totaled $131,017,125. Besides the allotment for direct relief, they included: $3,239,630 for 23 projects at Army posts, $1,155,529 for improvements at 27 National cemeteries, $1,000,000 for administrative, technical and other expenses of the Army Engineer Corps in connection with the work program; $1,172,500 to the Agriculture Department for the Forest Service, $2,500,000 to the Agriculture Department for the Soil Conservation Service, $800,000 for State works administration offices, $2,000,000 to the Treasury Department for general services in connection with the works program and $2,000,000 for the National Reemployment Service. In addition, allotments were recommended for a wide variety of small non-Federal projects, details of which were not revealed.

It was announced that persons on relief rolls will be employed so far as possible in connection with various administrative works for which allotments were made.

Farley Points Way on Answer to Supreme Court; Individualism in G. O. P.; Borah Clicks.

By Raymond Clapper

Speaking as chairman of the Democratic National Committee at a county Democratic rally in Elmira, N. Y., Postmaster General Farley has given the Administration's political answer to the Supreme Court's anti-New Deal decisions.

This utterance is important, not because Mr. Farley presumes to be an authority on constitutional matters, but because as the President's political manager his handling of the issue probably will be followed by the party's Class B stump speakers generally during the next campaign.

Mr. Farley relates a story which President Roosevelt told newspaper correspondents after an earlier Supreme Court decision which threw out the hot oil regulations. The story was that in a certain New York up-State community a bad grade crossing had resulted in several accidents. The town council posted a constable to guard the crossing. Two years later a court decided that the appointment of the constable was unconstitutional. Nevertheless, the President went on to say, during the two years in which the unconstitutional constable had been on the job a number of lives had been saved. So it was all to the good.

"So it is with the NRA," Mr. Farley continued. "The Supreme Court ruled that the Congress had exceeded its authority in enacting the measure, but for two years the NRA had functioned, it had put a lot of men to work, abolished child labor," and so on. "The principle may have been wrong, judicially considered, but it was eminently right from the humanitarian and utilitarian point of view."

After a further recital of Administration achievements, Mr. Farley returned to his basic theme: "All of this may have been unconstitutional, but there are about 7,000,000 people and their dependents to whom it meant salvation and I do not think that any of them is worrying over the constitutionality of it."

Again a further recital of accomplishment, followed by another return to the theme: "Not so bad for the NRA even if it was all deplorably unconstitutional! * * * It is regrettable that in the emergency and need for extraordinary remedies we proceeded outside of the strict legal interpretation of the powers of Congress. However, I can not find that this departure injured anybody, either materially or by an affront to his personal liberty."

This frank discussion of the Administration dilemma gives a color of support to what many persons are saying, namely, that Mr. Roosevelt has set about quietly to put the Supreme Court on the spot.

Their reasoning is this: Since the NRA decision, additional pressure has been put on Congress to rush through the Wagner disputes bill, the socialist security legislation, TVA amendments, Guffey coal bill, and other measures, without paying much heed to those who challenge the constitutionality of them. Congress quite frankly is passing the buck to the Supreme Court. Even business men have quit having jitters, taking the position that there is nothing to worry about because these measures will be thrown out by the Supreme Court.

Mr. Roosevelt's strategy in this, some believe, is to shove a large number of measures at the Supreme Court on the assumption that if they are thrown out next winter and spring, it will anger so many voters that Mr. Roosevelt will receive a popular mandate to push for some broadening of constitutional powers. Mr. Farley's treatment of the issue tends to support that view.

The ironical fact is that Mr. Roosevelt is being pushed in the direction of strong-arming his way through by the very people who throw up their hands in holy horror at the thought of adding one more amendment to the 21 which already have been added to the Constitution to keep it abreast of changes in the stream of national development.

Young Republicans of New York State have just adopted a platform for consideration of the party generally.

Some among them arrived at this conference with New Dealish inclinations, but were pushed aside by the right wingers. The right wingers began their platform with a denunciation of the Roosevelt Administration, a call for a balanced budget, and for restoration of full competition free from price fixing. Finally they wound up by urging:

Government regulation of natural resource industries.

Use by the Federal Government of "all the resources at its disposal" in assisting States and municipalities to provide the unemployed "not only with their bare material needs but their requirements for living according to American standards."

Appropriations for sound public works.

Unemployment insurance.

Old-age pensions.

Collective bargaining.

Plans to give employes "a share of the profits of the industries for which they work."

Minimum wage and maximum hour laws through interstate compacts.

A program of slum clearance and low-cost housing.

Retirement of submarginal lands.

Stabilization of farm prices by "Government purchases of surpluses in the open market," and bartering of them for foreign non-competitive products.

Legislation to protect the farmer by reducing the profit to the middleman.

Greater Federal aid for construction and maintenance of highways.

Coordination and inter-connection of all utility plants "where feasible under Government compulsion."

"That the difference between current (utility) rates and the rates shown to be justified by the facts revealed on a preliminary hearing be impounded by governmental authority pending final determination of rate litigation."

Legislation in advance for conscription of wealth in event of war.

And the young left-winger Republicans went away mad because the conservatives insisted on writing a platform of rugged individualism!

The Society of American Foresters has branded Secretary Ickes as a mossback. Appearing before a House committee recently in favor of a bill to change the name of his Interior Department to the Department of Conservation and Works, Ickes said "some people even talk of trees as a growing crop like peanuts or onions and delineate them as an agricultural product."

The foresters, who don't want the forestry bureau taken from Agriculture and given to Ickes retorted:

"The entire civilized world, including America, long ago came to recognize the fact that trees are a growing crop, capable of renewal, and not merely a mine to be exhausted. The Secretary of Interior alone appears to hold tenaciously to that outworn creed."

Senator Borah will be 70 years old Saturday, but his hand has lost none of its cunning. He still can write a statement that crackles into black headline type, and his timing is as perfect as ever. Borah, better than anyone in Congress during his 28 years there, has been able to spot an incoming tide and rush out to help it in, as he did in opposing the League of Nations, in proposing the Washington arms conference, and as he has just done in urging enactment of the Roosevelt share-the-wealth, or—as he calls it—share the burden program.

Democratic leaders in Congress wanted to let the tax program go over until next session. They were generally apathetic toward it. But Senator La Follette proposed action now. Huey Long called on Mr. Roosevelt to make good on his proposal. Pressure began to develop. Then Senator Borah leaped into Monday morning headlines with his statement. And a few hours later congressional leaders went to the White House and the decision to press for immediate action followed.

Thus Mr. Roosevelt's snowball grows as it rolls uphill in a Washington summer.

The plight of some Democratic leaders in Congress who are privately opposed to this program, but who now have to push it through, reminds one person at the Capitol of the Senator who favored an increase in senatorial salary, but for political reasons opposed it.

When the vote came and the salary increase was approved, he remarked to a colleague "Thank God, they got us beat."

There's been a slight mistake. All revenue measures, the Constitution says, shall originate in the House. Mr. Roosevelt thought it said the White House.

Ship Subsidy Bill Is Facing New Drive

By the Associated Press.

House leaders yesterday completed plans to bring up on the floor today the new ship subsidy bill and attempt to drive it to passage before adjournment tonight.

The Rules Committee approved a special resolution limiting debate on the ship subsidy bill itself to three hours. One hour, however, will be allowed on the resolution, making a total of four hours.

The ship bill provides for subsidies to compensate builders and operators for the dierences of cost in the United States and elsewhere in building and operating vessels. It creates a new maritime authority to administer the law.

Glass Scores Point in Fight On Banks Bill

His Sub-Committee Agrees to One-Year Extension of Insurance Law.

consideration before the Senate acts on comprehensive bank law revision.

Senator Fletcher, who favors enactment of the Administration measure without major changes, agreed with Glass that this can not now be done before July 1.

Admitting a resolution extending the existing deposit insurance plan is now necessary, he will contend, however, for a shorter extension.

The deposit insurance law now permits 100 per cent insurance of individual deposits up to $5,000. This is said to cover 99 per cent of all deposits.

On July 1, however, under existing law a "permanent" deposit insurance fund must be set up on the books of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, unless Congress acts to the contrary. Deposits under this arrangements would be insured 100 per cent up to $10,000; 75 per cent, up to $50,000, and 50 per cent on the excess.

Point Opposed by Banks.

But, more burdensome from the banking standpoint, is a requirement that banks operating under the plan subscribe to Class A stock in the FDIC in an amount equal to one-half of 1 per cent of their deposit liabilities. One-half of this subscription fee must be paid in by July 1, and the remainder would be subject to call of the FDIC directors. The total cost to the banks, it was estimated, would be about $320,000,000, $160,000,000 of which must be paid in by July 1.

It is argued that this may force many banks to withdraw from the insurance plan. Aside from onerous subscription requirements, some States have laws prohibiting banks from subscribing to this type of stock.

Under the FDIC title of the Eccles bank bill, now before the Glass sub-committee, banks instead would be assessed one-twelfth of 1 per cent of insurable deposits, for coverage in the insurance fund. The bill as it passed the House provided an assessment of one-eighth.

Fund Maximum $500,000,000.

Under this title, deposits would continue to be insured 100 per cent up to $5,000. Assessments would stop automatically when the insurance fund reached $500,000,000, and would be resumed again when the fund was depleted by 15 per cent.

The Glass subcommittee last night had come to no complete agreement on Title 2, carrying increased powers for the Federal Reserve Board tending toward central bank control.

Efforts continued to force compromises on some provisions of the title strengthening central regulation of the credit flow by such levers as open-market operations, discount rates and deposit reserve requirements.

"We seem to have gotten together on some controversial points," said Senator Glass.

Kissing One's Dog Is Legal, Judge Says

If a man wants to kiss his dog—and the dog doesn't object—it's within the law and his own business, Judge Robert E. Mattingly ruled in Police Court yesterday.

Judge Mattingly, sitting in for Judge Gus A. Schuldt during the latter's vacation, was hearing disorderly conduct charges against a colored man. The man testified that he was kissing his dog when a "girl friend" objected. He insisted the dog's mouth was "sanitary." One word led to another and a policeman arrived.

Judge Mattingly dismissed the charges, holding that a man has a right to kiss his dog without outside interference.

chase of equipment at interest charges not to exceed 3½ per cent. Repayment, under certain conditions, may be made over a period of 60 years.

Senator Alva B. Adams (Democrat), Colorado, led a vigorous fight on the measure, and in the end succeeded in replacing indefinite interest provisions with an interest rate of 3½ per cent.

"This bill," he said, "is either a futile gesture, or is the entering wedge which ultimately may destroy the ability of the United States to borrow money."

Adams argued that if the Government attempted to provide for all farm tenants, it would cost $20,000,000,000. The Bankhead bill, he contended, would take care of only one-fourth of 1 per cent of these tenants in the first year, and only 2½ per cent in 3 years.

"It is not the function of the Government to buy farms for anybody," he said. "Once we say it is an obligation of the Government, there can be no stopping."

Bill Branded Socialistic.

Senator L. J. Dickinson (Republican), Iowa, and Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, argued the bill followed a socialistic trend evident in other New Deal legislation. Dickinson said the bill was "clearly unconstitutional."

King offered an amendment to place the accounts of the corporation under strict supervision of the Comptroller General's office. The amendment was adopted.

An amendment by Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr., (Progressive), Wisconsin, enabling the corporation to "lease" land to tenants and share croppers, was adopted. The proposal was defeated in the Senate several weeks ago, and had been eliminated from the revised bill reported by the Agriculture Committeee. The leases could run for five years, but there would be no prohibition on renewals.

The bill was enthusiastically supported by Majority Leader Robinson, Senator John H. Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, claimed it had Administration support.

Fourteen Republicans voted with 18 Democrats against the measure. Three Republicans, Norris, of Nebraska; Schall, of Minnesota, and Frazier, of North Dakota, joined with 1 Progressive, 1 Farmer Laborite and 40 Democrats in voting "aye."

Roosevelt Backs State Control Over Liquor

President Roosevelt has signed the joint resolution of Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, and Representative Bland (Democrat), of Virginia, designed to bring the new Chamberlin Hotel at Old Point Comfort, Va., under Virginia liquor regulations.

The hotel claimed immunity from the State liquor law because it is on property of the Federal Government. The measure will compel the hotel to stop selling hard liquor by the drink.

Miners Resume Talk on Wages With Operators

Resolution Providing for Slight Increase Is Defeated.

Negotiations between bituminous miners and operators in an effort to reach a new wage agreement were resumed yesterday. Operators meeting with the miners offered a resolution to extend the present contract until April 1, and miners offered a resolution providing for slightly increased wages. Both resolutions were defeated.

INSERT A COAL

This action was followed by appointment of a joint committee of nine miners and nine operators who will meet today and report back to the conference tonight.

The contract, twice extended, will expire next Sunday and members of the United Mine Workers of America are again threatening to walk out unless an extension or a new contract is agreed upon.

Both sides represented in the meeting are hopeful for the early passage of the Guffey bill, setting up a "little NRA," but one powerful group of operators is opposing the measure. Miners are asking a $5.50 basic daily scale with a 30-hour week, while operators want a $5 scale and a 35-hour week.

Indications were that the Guffey bill would not be passed before the contract expires. The last extension was agreed to at the request of President Roosevelt, who may ask further extension.

Meanwhile, the Wagner bill, guaranteeing the right of collective bargaining and setting up a labor disputes board, was nearing final acceptance in the Congressional conference committee.

The conferees eliminated a House amendment providing that nothing in the bill should abridge freedom of speech and freedom of the press. It was contended that this was an unnecessary repetition of the constitutional provision.

The only provision not agreed upon is that defining a labor unit for collective bargaining. A House amendment provides that such a unit shall not include employes of more than one employer. The committee will meet today to consider this amendment.

France Speeds New Warships To Completion

Protective Accord With Italy and Great Britain Is Answer to Germany.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 24.—Speedy completion of warships under construction and "protective accords" with Great Britain and Italy constitute France's answer to Germany's projected fleet.

Francois Pietri, minister of the navy, told a delegation of the navy committee of the Chamber of Deputies today Adolf Hitler's naval program was "serious," but not a "catastrophe" to this country.

He outlined the plan which he will present to the full committee tomorrow.

Pietri's idea, committee members said, is to hasten the construction of the Dunkerque, now nearly completed, and then to lay the keel of a 35,000-ton dreadnaught in October.

Work on many small craft likewise will be speeded without exceeding the Washington limitation treaty, but with everything prepared for heavy building if necessary when the pact expires December 31, 1936.

A pact with England, Pietri said, could assure co-operation in the North Atlantic, while Italy might aid in protecting the Mediterranean and the African coast.

The cheese company asks $1,000,000 for loss of business and good will, $100,000 for spoilage and $48,000 for loss of profits and other damages.

Two Identified In $427,000 Truck Holdup

Gangsters Seized Near Joe Louis' Camp Named in Brooklyn Robbery.

By the United Press.

Paterson, N. J., June 24.—Two of the eight gangsters seized yesterday in a summer cottage "fortress" near Joe Louis' training camp were identified tonight as participants in the daring $427,000 Brooklyn armored truck robbery last August, police said.

The pair, according to Detective Capt. James Smith, of the Paterson police, are the prisoners listed as Edward D. Gaffney, 35, and John J. Hughes, 31, both of New York.

The eight captives, seized at dawn as they slept in their summer camp at Mountain View, N. J., were viewed several times today by the driver of the armored truck, two of the truck guards and a CWA worker who was near the Rubel Ice Co. plant when the well-planned holdup occurred.

Second Line-up.

Earlier police had said that no positive identifications were made, although two of the hoodlums were described as "suspicious."

Another line-up was arranged, in which the eight prisoners and several other men were paraded—one at a time—before the four witnesses.

This time, according to Capt. Smith, Gaffney and Hughes were positively identified as members of the Brooklyn mob.

The eight gangsters are held under New Jersey's newly enacted "public enemy" statute, a provision with teeth in it that establishes a maximum 20-year sentence for convicted criminals found consorting or possessing arms.

All but one of the eight have police records ranging from larceny to murder.

Their rickety bungalow, a few miles from Louis' training camp was a literal fortress in which an arsenal of sub-machine guns, pistols, tear gas and even T. N. T. bombs were found by the 30 police who swooped down on the place.

Police still admitted the possibility the gang may have plotted to kidnap the Detroit Negro pugilist, who meets Primo Carnera tomorrow night.

The gang also is suspected of murder, safe-cracking and hijacking. A woman seized yesterday said she was the wife of one of the prisoners. She was not linked to the mob's crimes.

Lehman Demands Vice Prosecutor

N. Y. Governor Threatens to Supersede Dodge.

By the Associated Press.

Albany, N. Y., June 24.—Gov. Herbert H. Lehman tonight threatened to supersede District Attorney William C. Dodge of New York City if he did not appoint a special prosecutor in a drive to stamp out the "various types of organized crime and vice in New York County."

The Governor wrote Dodge that he would direct the attorney general to step in unless Dodge named a prosecutor "of energy" to press a "concerted and vigorous drive."

The Governor declared that his plan included an extraordinary special and trial term of the Supreme Court for New York County, to be presided over by Justice Philip McCook.

Four names were submitted by Mr. Lehman to District Attorney Dodge from which to select the special prosecutor.

These were: Charles Evans Hughes, jr., George Z. Medalie, Thomas D. Thacher and Charles H. Tuttle.

Date for Trial Of Mrs. Waley Is Set as July 9

Jury to Hear Weyerhaeuser Kidnap Case Will Be Chosen July 5.

By the Associated Press.

Tacoma, Wash., June 24.—A jury to try fair-haired Margaret Waley for the $200,000 Weyerhaeuser kidnaping will be selected July 5, Federal Judge E. E. Cushman decided today after refusing for the third time to accept her plea of guilty.

Actual taking of testimony will be delayed until July 9, upon request of an attorney appointed by the court to defend the 19-year-old wife of Harmon M. Waley, who already has begun a 45-year prison term.

Waley's plea of guilty to kidnaping and conspiracy in the abduction of 9-year-old George Weyerhaeuser was accepted by Judge Cushman Friday. The long sentence was meted out at once.

But because Waley insisted his wife knew nothing of the kidnaping of the lumber family heir until several days after it was committed, the judge decreed she must stand trial on charges of conspiracy and kidnaping and her plea officially changed to one of denial of guilt.

Whether she also will be charged with extortion for writing the second ransom note will be decided later, Judge Cushman said.

John F. Dore, Seattle attorney and former mayor, who has been the center of many sensational trials, will take over the defense of Mrs. Waley next week, replacing Stephen J. O'Brien, Tacoma lawyer, who was appointed by the court.

Dore announces Waley would be brought from McNeil Island Federal Prison to testify for his wife.

Both the Government and the defense plan a speedy trial. The Weyerhaeuser boy was kidnaped on his way home from school May 24. He was returned unharmed to his parents June 1.

The Waleys were captured in Salt Lake City after a spending spree with their share of the kidnap money.

William Dainard, alias William Mahan, who has a long police record, still is being sought as a confederate. He was implicated by the Waleys.

Judge Rescinds Life Sentences On Boys Who Kidnaped Sheriff

By the Associated Press.

Jasper, Ind., June 24.—Two Huntington, W. Va., boys, both in their 'teens beamed today when an Indiana judge tempered the sentence of life terms imposed on them for kidnaping a sheriff.

Judge John L. Sumner set aside the sentences, mandatory for kidnaping, and accepted pleas of guilty to the charge of auto banditry.

The judge then sentenced the youngest boy, Bascum Ray, jr., 14, to the Indiana Boys School but suspended the sentence when his parents agreed to place him in charge of a parole agent in their home city.

Ray's companion, Maurice Sheridan, 17, received a sentence of one to ten years in the reformatory. Evidence was given that Sheridan had persuaded the other to run away from home.

Young Ray departed with his parents after promises to stay out of trouble henceforth.

During the day Gov. Paul V. McNutt had declared he would intervene unless there was some mitigation of the severe sentences. The Governor said:

"I am in favor of the Indiana kidnaping law which provides for life imprisonment, but common sense must be used in the application of it. If the court at Jasper does not act today, I will."

The Governor's statement came just prior to Judge Sumner's setting aside of the life terms on the motion of T. Ernest Maholm, Indianapolis attorney, engaged by Bascom Ray, sr., who came to the Hoosier State Saturday, accompanied by his wife.

Young Ray and Sheridan were arrested a week ago by Sheriff Ed Leugers, who said he found them in possession of a stolen automobile in which there was a quantity of liquor.

The sheriff brought them to the jail here. He said the boys drew guns while he was taking them into the jail, forced him to climb back into the car and took him 25 miles into the country, where they released him, fettered with his own handcuffs, when the car went into a ditch.

A posse, notified o fthe sheriff's kidnaping, came upon the boys in a field and captured them after firing several shots, one of which inflicted a slight wound in young Ray's right shoulder.

19 Die in Fire As Colombian Planes Crash

month ago, flying one of two Ford tri-motor planes which he and another pilot of the same line, an American, Stan Harvey, had flown to New York from Detroit where they were purchased at the Ford plant.

Samper's history, as related by his aviator friends at Roosevelt Field, was somewhat of a story book legend among airmen.

Scion of a wealthy Colombian family of planters, he fell heir to a sum of money which was once estimated at close to $1,000,000.

He came to this country when a young man and was educated at Phillips Andover Academy at Andover, Mass., graduating from there about 10 years ago.

He then spent several years playing the stock market, and in his leisure learned to fly.

Wiped out in the stock crash, he returned to South America to capitalize upon his hobby of flying.

He persuaded his mother and another brother to back him in the purchase of a small cabin plane, with which he opened Colombia's first newspaper and mail air route.

With the profits he bought a passenger ship, and with the aid of Harvey and other American airmen whom be brought to Colombia, put into successful operation the country's first passenger airline.

Its success necessitated the purchase of the additional ships which Harvey and Samper recently flew down.

Friends of Samper at Roosevelt Field said that they thought the Lester Strauss, listed in dispatches as among those killed, was one of the American officials of Samper's line who flew down with him the last time. It was recalled that the third member of the party said he lived in Richmond, Va.

St. Paul Police Purged; Crime Tie-up Charged

Chief Suspended With 4 Others, Commissioner Asks 4 More Quit.

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, Minn., June 24.—Acting on information gathered by a private espionage system, Public Safety Commissioner H. E. Warren today shocked citizens with charges the police department maintained a "startling" alliance with crime, and stunned his force by inaugurating a wholesale purge.

His allegations, a local corrollary to the branding of St. Paul over a year ago by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings as a "crime spot," were given out along with formal notice of his suspension of Chief of Police Michael Culligan and four other officers and demands for the resignations of four more. He promised further dismissals and suspensions.

Declaring in a letter to Mayor Mark H. Gehan "We found a startling connection between certain police officials and a ring of gamblers who were conducting a race-horse lottery on a large scale," and alleging police raids were tipped off to favored individuals, that police profited from vice, engaged in political activities and connived in "a sensational and illicit connection" with certain criminal lawyers. Warren said he counted on the mayor for "whole-hearted cooperation in this effort to give St. Paul better police protection."

A copy of the letter was sent to County Attorney Michael Kinkead for possible grand jury action.

In addition to Chief Culligan, for whose post Warren vainly sought the appointment of Alexander Jamie, former head of the Chicago "secret six" a year ago, Inspector of Detectives Charles Tierney, Lieut. Thomas Dahill, Charles J. McGowan and Patrick Ridge, a department employe, were suspended for 30 days. Culligan was out of the city today.

Jack Crumley, assistant chief; Fred W. Raesch, his assistant, and Detectives Raymond D. Flannagan and Michael McGinnis were directed to hand in their resignations within 24 hours under penalty of summary discharge. The four officers said they would fight dismissal.

CCC Worker, 19, Is Shot to Death

Round Hill Enrollee Killed With Own Gun.

By the Associated Press.

Bluefield, W. Va., June 24.—State and Federal authorities joined in an investigation today of the mysterious death of Edward Fewell, 19, CCC enrollee of Round Hill, Va., whose bullet-pierced body was found about 8:30 a. m. a few hundred yards from the Conservation Corps Camp at Bastian, Va. He had been killed by his own gun.

Fewell was reported in Bastian by fellow campers at 8:30 last night, and was not seen again until his body was found within sight of the main road. About it were innumerable tracks of both men and women. To the left of the body was Fewell's revolver. Authorities said a woman's apron was found near the body.

The body will be taken to the home of Fewell's mother, Mrs. Mary Fewell, at Round Hill, tomorrow.

Lynchburg, Va., June 24.—Fire in the 100-year-old frame building at Twelfth and Clay streets did $4,000 damage before it was extinguished by four fire companies. The fire started in the rear of the second floor. A grocery store and three restaurants were housed in the building.

Curtsies Bother Debs, King May Be Absent

By the Associated Press.

London, June 24.—Uncertainty whether King George will come to London from Sandringham for the Courts tomorrow and Wednesday nights caused some difficulty today as American debutantes and matrons rehearsed for the event.

The Americans had to practice both the single and double curtsise at a party at the United States Embassy. They have to know how to curtsy before both their majesties or just before Queen Mary.

Broker Pledged 1,860% Profits, Say Investors

Justice Department Seeks Missing New Yorker as 'Second Ponzi.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 24.—Testimony revealing a one-man "investment service" which operated from coast to coast and which promised investors profits as high as 1,860 per per cent was presented today to the grand jury investigating the business affairs of William F. Peterson, missing New York stock broker.

Department of Justice agents conferred with Assistant Attorney General Ambrose V. McCall, who obtained a court order requiring Peterson's appearance and submission of the books and records of the Isco Service Corporation, allegedly operated by Peterson.

McCall said that from his information at least 100 persons, resident in localities from New York to California, dealt with Peterson in sums ranging from $1,000 to $100,000.

He characterized the service's operations as "the greatest in this country since the days of Ponzi."

Peterson's service, McCall said, was a form of stock market manipulation. The client would deposit a sum of money and in return receive a note for the full amount payable at 5½ per cent interest in a year. With this, McCall said, went an agreement whereby the investor was to receive 100 per cent profits every month, half in cash and half in reinvested funds.

The service also offered "special accounts," McCall said, the nature of which were apparently concealed from even the client.

Among the witnesses who appeared before the gand jury today was Wallace Brown, president of the Grand Rapids Varnish Co., of Grand Rapids, Mich., who testified that he had invested $20,000 in the scheme.

Another witness, Mrs. Marie de Carie, said she put in $65,000, but said that she received but $16,000 in return.

Peterson was reported missing from his Fifth avenue hotel a week ago by his wife, Hilda.

McCall said that additional witnesses would appear Tuesday morning.

Kentucky Feud Claims 3d Man Within a Week

County Officials Ask Court to Aid as Mountineers Deal Vengeance.

By the Associated Press.

Manchester, Ky., June 24.—Earl Porter, for whom a warrant had been issued for the killing last week of Janes Cupp, was shot to death today in the hills of Clay County, famed feudist region.

Porter was the third man within a week to die "with his boots on" in this county. Apparently another case had been settled in the traditional manner "out of court."

The report of the latest killing came as five county officials here were drafting a call upon Kentucky's Chief Justice William Rogers Clay for aid in obtaining a special term of Clay Circuit Court to investigate the assassination of Bobbie Baker on Main street here Saturday. Baker, who came back from Indiana to his native haunts last week for a visit, met the same fate as his father, grandfather, a brother and a nephew.

The nephew, Commonwealth's Attorney Frank H. Baker, and a companion, John Brockman, were slain by slugs fired from the courthouse three years ago. Their bodies lay on the street five hours until State troops reached the scene. Another brother, Tom Baker, is wanted for the assassination of Police Judge C. P. Stivers here in the spring of 1933.

In their request for a special term of court, county officials said: "In some sections of the county there is a condition of lawlessness with much arson and occasional bloodshed. On last Saturday a former citizen of the county was killed in an automobile at one of the most public places in the town of Manchester by an unknown party. We have just now received information that in the west end of the county where a lawless condition exists, a young man was killed. Several homicides have occurred in this immediate neighborhood recently and much property has been destroyed by fire of incendiary origin."

Slayer Gets Stay From Firing Squad

By the Associated Press.

Salt Lake City, June 24.—A triple slayer, Delbert Green, won a temporary respite today from death before a firing squad—a fate to which he has been sentenced three times. Told of the stay, he said: "Is that so? That's fine."

Scheduled to die Wednesday, Green was granted an insanity hearing to be held the first week of July. If he should be adjudged sane, he would be sentenced a fourth time.

Green chose the firing squad in preference to hanging after his first conviction for the slaying of his uncle, James Green, five years ago. He also killed his wife and mother-in-law. Granting of new trials prolonged the case.

Competitors Plan to Study Nippon's Trade

Japan's Industrial Methods Under Scrutiny of Other Nations.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, June 24.—The possibility of using Japan's own industrial methods to compete with her cheap products was raised today at the convention of the International Chamber of Commerce.

Sir Arthur Balfour of Great Britain told the 1,000 delegates from 35 countries although Japanese competition may harass individual business, he was convinced it "has great possibilities for international economic good."

Repression Impossible.

Defending their country's trade policies, Japanese industrialists asserted "repression of Japan's natural growth as a competitive power is impossible." They said, however, they were anxious to see the end of cartel methods in world trade.

"The world overlooks the constructive value of Japanese competition, thus magnifying the threat of Japanese trade," said Yosaburo Ito of Japan.

American and English business leaders said after the session in informal discussion the only means of meeting Japan's competition was to study her methods of "rationalization of industry," whereby national co-operation turned a whole industry into a single company instead of dozens.

U. S. Sends Experts.

One American delegate said, "the United States industrialists are turning the tables by sending experts to study Japanese production methods."

Walchand Hiarchand, Indian business executive, startled the delegates by stating that India would be a powerful industrial nation if England stopped forcing India into agricuture in order to protect the mother country's industries.

Frederick Fentener van Vlissing, of the Netherlands, president of the body, sounded the keynote by declaring the "world war of quotas and exchange" must end if economic prosperity is to return. He praised the "clear thinking" embodied in the United States commercial treaty policy.

Barrymore Is Ordered To Appear in Divorce

Hollywood, June 24 (U.P.).—John Barrymore, stage and sceen actor, must either produce his classic profile in a California court to answer divorce charges by his wife, Dolores Costello, or make a long-distance deposition, Superior Judge Robert W. Kenny ruled today.

The decision was made following a complaint of Miss Costello's attorneys that Barrymore was remaining in the East, refusing to "pay any attention" to Miss Costello's divorce.

She has charged Barrymore with "habitual intemperance" and cruelty, claiming he knocked her down and hit her maid in the eye. Judge Kenny ruled that unless Barrymore answered these charges, the divorce will be "uncontested."

Rabell Denies Charge of Bribe In SEC Inquiry

Former Employe of U. S. Unit Held for Extortion Trial July 9.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 24.—William A. Rabell, former assistant chief investigator for the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission, was held under bail by the Government today for early trial on a charge of soliciting a bribe from J. Edward Jones, wealthy oil royalties dealer, to "fix" a case coming soon before the commission.

Obviously laboring under strain after a night spent in the House of Detention, Rabell pleaded his innocence before United States Commissioner G. W. Cotter, who fixed bail at $1,500 and set July 9 for trial.

Jones, appearing before the grand jury and Assistant United States Attorney Charles T. Murphy, predicted additional developments.

Others Implicated.

"I have just left in the district attorney's office evidence which will put in the same boat with Rabell four or five other persons," he said.

Rabell, a short, red-faced man, was accompanied only by his 19-year-old son at the arraignment. His light summer flannels and yellow polo shirt were wrinkled, and he was without a tie.

"I can, and will, explain everything in a day or two," he said hurriedly. "I come from a reputable family—I have never been in difficulties."

After making bail and going free late in the afternoon, he added as he left with his wife and a friend: "This is not going to be any headache for me, but it will be for a lot of other people."

Rabell was taken into custody by Department of Justice agents yesterday at the Scarsdale home of Jones at the conclusion of a detectaphone-tapped conversation in which he allegedly offered to "tip off" the commission's case against Jones for $27,500.

According to the broker, who had called the agents to his home beforehand, Rabell accepted $250 as down payment. The money was found by agents where Rabell was alleged to have tossed it when the agents hurried into the room.

Rabell was relieved of his duties with the commission June 20, but, acccording to Jones, was to be on the Government pay roll until July 1.

"Dumb Witness" Charge.

"Rabell promised to be a dumb witness for the Government," he said, "to point out to my auditors the case which the Govrenment prepared so that my auditors, collaborating with him, could assemble information which he knew existed in my books, and which if presented would refute the case the commission had built up.

"In addition to the cash he demanded, I was to give a good job to another individual now employed by the commission. Rabell also advised me that still another individual on the staff of the commission had parceled out the names and addresses of my clientele."

The hearing on Jones' case is scheduled to come before the commission next Thursday.

The Securities Commission said in a statement that the resignation of William Raybell as assistant chief accountant investigator for the commission had been requested on June 13.

"This action was taken on the grounds that his services were unsatisfactory to the commission," the statement said.

"On June 22, the commission through confidential sources received word that Raybell had approached one J. Edward Jones, a New York oil royalty dealer against whom the commission had previously instituted two proceedings, with a proposition to 'throw' the Government's case in return for a sum of money, and that Jones was arranging a trap in which to catch Raybell," the statement added.

It explained that the two cases against Jones involved the sale of oil securities.

Wiley Commended For Macon Rescue

By the Associated Press.

Disclosure that Lieut. Comdr. Herbert V. Wiley rescued a brother officer in the crash of the dirigible Macon was made yesterday by Secretary Swanson when he commended the commander for his "heroic and prompt action."

Swanson revealed Lieut. (J. G.) George Campbell, of Springfield, Ohio, was struck by a part of the ship as it fell into the sea off the California coast last February. He was about to be carried under when Wiley, commander of the ship, swam to him and towed him out of danger to a life raft.

Lobby Probers To Air Findings

Chain Store Records' Data to Be Submitted.

By the Associated Press.

The House "Super Lobby" Committee today will report the findings it obtained from two truck loads of records subpenaed three weeks ago from the Food, Drug and Grocery Chain Stores of America.

Chairman Patman (Democrat), Texas, declined to give an indication of what would be revealed. He announced, however, that John A. Logan, executive secretary and manager of the chain association's Washington office, would be questioned first.

Under a House resolution citing charges it was a "super lobby" to coerce Congressmen in behalf of legislation favorable to chain stores, the committee was formed to inquire into the set-up of the newformed American Retail Federation. The authorization was broadened later to give the committee widest authority to go into the chain store situation, retail and wholesale.

Hull Describes Peril to World In Nationalism

Gets Degree at Wisconsin, Lists 3 Impediments to Recovery.

By the Associated Press.

Madison, Wis., June 24.—Secretary of State Cordell Hull today cited extreme nationalism, neglect of fundamentals and failure of the masses to take intelligent interest in public affairs as the three chief impediments to solution of world economic ills.

"Statesmen in most countries have thus far seemed oblivious of these phases, so destructive of human progress," the Secretary declared at the University of Wisconsin commencement exercises after he was awarded the honorary degree of doctor of laws.

He emphasized the complexity of political, economic, social and moral problems and said their solution would determine the extent to which democracy and civilization may be promoted and preserved but expressed faith in the ability of youth to overcome the "monumental difficulties."

Hull viewed current problems as world wide and needing for their solution "a large capacity for co-operation, restraint of selfish interests and a generous measure of self-control." Modern society, he said, can not operate on "mere governmental coercion."

He said the instability and fall of many popular governmental structures throughout the world, the collapse of disarmament attempts, the halting of peace movements and the "feverish races in world armaments" have failed to arouse adequate concern on the part of most statesman and holders of public opinion.

"It is high time that every human being should inquire where the world is going," he added.

President Glenn Frank said that after the tumult of present times had died, the American tradition of private enterprise and political liberty, "modernized," will remain standing "in the midst of the inevitable failure of the fascism and communism which have seduced the minds of so many disillusioned millions."

Recipients of honorary degrees, in addition to Secretary Hull, were President James Bryant Conant of Harvard, Prof. Frederick L. Paxson, of the University of California, and Thomas D. Thatcher, of New York.

were unusually poor as a consequence of a prolonged drought."

The usual seasonal increase in freight loadings was reported for May. Coal shipments showed a marked increase, while loadings of miscellaneous freight declined.

Department store sales, as measured by the board's seasonally adjusted index, increased from 73 per cent of the 1923-25 average in April, to 76 per cent in May and were at approximately the same level as a year ago.

Commodity prices had shown a light decline by the week ending June 15, under the April and May average. The principal drops were in grain and cotton prices, while prices of commodities other than farm products and foods advanced slightly.

The board reported that during the five weeks ended June 19 reserve balances of member banks increased $175,000,000 as a result of gold imports, offset in part by an increase in Treasury cash and deposits with Reserve banks. Excess reserves of member banks on June 12 were above $2,500,000,000 for the first time, but declined somewhat the following week.

Demand Deposits Increase.

Member banks in leading cities showed an increase of $540,000,000 in net demand deposits in the four weeks ended June 12, due in part to gold imports. Time deposits decline by $150,000,000, of which $70,000,000 represented a decline at New York City banks consequent upon a ruling of the New York clearing house in May prohibiting interest on new time deposits maturing in less than six months.

Treasury figures showed that revenue for the fiscal year has totaled $3,743,000,000, as compared with $3,053,000,000 last year. The estimated total for the current year was $3,711,000,000.

The deficit for the fiscal year, it was indicated, would be about $3,500,000,000, as compared with an estimated deficit at the beginning of the year of $4,869,000,000.

Income Revenue Higher.

All forms of receipts increased during the present fiscal year. Income tax collections were $1,083,000,000, as compared with $801,000,000 a year ago; miscellaneous internal revenue $1,628,000,000 as compared with $1,438,000,000, and customs $335,000,000 as compared with $307,000,000.

General expenditures totaled $3,095,000,000, as compared with an estimate of $3,321,000,000, and emergency expenditures were $4,052,000,000, compared with an estimate of $5,260,000,000. During the same period last year general expenditures were $2,521,000,000 and emergency expenditures were $3,776,000,000.

House Deletes U. S. Aid, Passes Bill for Airport

to get the Senate bill adopted as a substitute measure. Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, so far has resisted every attempt to obtain a report on any local airport bill on the ground that the District is not financially able to bear the expense.

Before Blanton injected the always controversial fiscal relations issue into the debate on the airport bill, the House appeared overwhelmingly in favor of adoption of the legislation despite Smith's cry that an effort was being made to sell the District a "white elephant" in the Washington Airport.

After adoption of the Blanton amendment, the bill passed the House on a roll call vote, 215 to 21.

Smith pointed out that Washington Airport had been sold at auction for $600,000, but that now its owners wanted at least $1,000,000 for it. He insisted that even the closing of Military road would not eliminate its hazards, as the heavily traveled Alexandria pike, No. 1, U. S. highway, skirts the field on the east.

Nichols ridiculed the charge, however, that the commission is "stacked" for Washington Airport and dared any member to impugn the motives of any of the seven proposed commissioners.

The Oklahoman made a valiant effort to defeat Blanton's amendment saddling the whole cost of the airport on the District, pointing out that the Federal Government would use the field for its various non-military aviation agencies and that the airport should be the pride of the National Capital.

The debate over the Blanton amendment went so far afield that it got into District taxation. Representative W. D. McFarlane (Democrat), of Texas, in trying to kill time while Blanton wrote out his amendment to overcome a point of order, asserted that the District "pays a tax rate of but $1.25 on $1,000, with assessments about half their true value.

Nichols and other members pointed out he was in error throughout; that the tax rate is $1.50 on $100 property and that assessments are practically 100 per cent of valuation.

Several members took the floor to call Washington Airport one of the most hazardous in the country and to urge the House to pass legislation which woud give the Capital an adequate and safe flying field.

Representative Malvin J. Maas (Republican), of Minnesota, a Marine Corps aviator overseas during the World War, said:

"I'll hold this House responsible if anyone is killed at Washington Airport as a result of our delay here."

Representative William Berlin (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, asserted:

"We're holding memorial services here."

Piquett Baited By Testimony From Old Trial

Chicago Attorney Charged With Harboring Aid of Dillinger.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 24.—Attorney Louis Piquett underwent a rigorous cross-examination today in his trial on charges of harboring Homer Van Meter as Government prosecutors baited him with testimony he gave in his earlier charges of harboring Van Meter's mob chief, John Dillinger.

Government and defense rested conditionally late in the day. Piquett's counsel informed Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan they would attempt to produce a "surprise" witness, whose identity was not disclosed.

Piquett denied making arrangements for the face-lifting operation performed on Van Meter by Drs. Wilhelm Loeser and Harold B. Cassidy, and declared he did not know Van Meter was a fugitive from justice when he met the gangster in Dillinger's Chicago hideout last summer.

The Government then dug into Piquett's previous testimony to show that he defended Evelyn Frechette, Dillinger's girl friend, when she was tried in St. Paul as a co-conspirator with Van Meter in harboring Dillinger.

"So you asked that jury to free Evelyn Frechette," inquired Prosecutor McMahon, "without reading the indictment against her?"

"Possibly, yes," Piquett answered.

"You didn't tell the truth before, then?" McMahon insisted.

"The jury thought I did (in his trial on charges of harboring Dillinger)," Piquett snapped. "They acquitted me."

Piquett attempted to fasten blame for arranging the surgery on the surgeons, Arthur O'Leary, former investigator for Piquett, and James Probasco, in whose home the operations were performed.

Van Meter, Piquett testified, was dissatisfied with the operation, and "threatened the whole mob."

"Then you were one of the mob?" McMahon asked.

"I was there," Piquett retorted.

Judge Sullivan overruled a defense motion for a directed verdict of acquittal.

D. C. Subway Bill Is Set for House is the only practicable relief from the evils of traffic congestion and the scores of deaths which are the result of crowded streets.

"Not a single one of the experts that have studied this problem has found against the subway system. It is true that some have suggested that construction be delayed, but they have been influenced solely by financial conditions and the fear that the street railway company might have to bear the cost."

Soil Conditions Problem.

Roberts said that "general discussion should be terminated, and the first step of making borings as to soil conditions, studies as to traffic and cost, and preliminary plans as to design should start at once."

The District Commissioners, he added, are the logical persons to conduct the survey because they have "the interests of the District of Columbia at heart" and a knowledge of underground conditions.

Morgan's Miniatures Return $125,000 on 1st Day of Auction

By the Associated Press.

London, June 24.—J. Pierpont Morgan had about $125,000 more cash on hand tonight as a result of the first day's sale of his $2,000,000 collection of miniatures at auction.

With an almost imperceptible inclination of his head Lord Duveen outdistanced all bidders for the gem of the collection, Hans Holbein's "Portrait of Mrs. Pemberton," painted on the back of a playing card during the reign of Henry VIII.

He paid 5,900 guineas (about $30,600), for the miniature. When asked what he intended to do with it, Lord Duveen laughingly replied, "I have bought it for stock."

Bidding for the Holbein was spirited and rapid, starting at £500 and advancing by £500, £200 and £100 jumps before Dr. N. Beets, of Amsterdam, withdrew from competition.

American dealers confined themselves to bidding on other lots. By the time total sales had reached £17,000 agents for two American firms had captured 40 per cent of the sales, but did not indicate whether they were operating for British or Americans.

The historic "Armada Jewel" was bought for 2,700 guineas, nearly $4,000 more than Morgan paid for it, by a representative of Lord Wakefield, who underwrote the purchase for the National Art Collection Fund. It will be placed in the Victoria and Albert Museum.

NRA Impetus To Prosperity, Farley Asserts

Its Work in 2 Years Will Carry Country Toward Recovery, He Says.

By the United Press.

Elmira, N. Y., June 24.—Postmaster General James A. Farley, told the Chemung County Democratic committee tonight that the impetus given to business by the NRA for the two years of its existence will carry the country toward prosperity.

"We cannot hope that recovery will be as rapid as it would have been had the constitutionality of the NRA not been determined adversely," Farley said. "But the seed the NRA has planted has obtained such a growth that public sentiment will not permit all the good to be lost."

Farley claimed the NRA brought reemployment to nearly 60 per cent of those out of work.

"All this may have been unconstitutional," Farley said, "but there are about 7,000,000 people and their dependents to whom it meant salvation and I do not think that any of them is worrying over the constitutionality of it."

The Postmaster General pointed out that his department reflects better times. Postal receipts, he continued, for the first ten months of the present fiscal year were up 10 1-3 per cent in the smaller postoffices of the country and 6 per cent in the larger offices.

Farley explained that when business was bad the mails fell off because companies did not send so many letters, packages or bills, but when times became better the mails picked up.

The Postmaster General said that Franklin Roosevelt will be remembered because he gave the country a chance to catch its breath, not because the Supreme Court declared the NRA unconstitutional during his administration.

Holland Faces Trial In Banker's Kidnaping

Edwardsville, Ill., June 24 (AP).—Walter Holland, alias "Irish" O'Malley, went on trial here today facing prosecution promises that the death penalty would be asked for his alleged participation in the kidnaping of August Luer, wealthy Alton, Ill., banker, in July, 1933.

Jury selection proceeded at a snail's pace and only one juror was accepted tentatively by both sides after a day of examination.

Brought to trial after a two-year search resulted in his capture in a Kansas City apartment last month, O'Malley came into courtroom dressed in a dapper gray suit. Mr. and Mrs. Luer were spectators.

Killing of Custer Inadvertent, Artist Told by Sioux Warrior

Sitting Bull Had Ordered General's Life Be Spared, Barron Brown Hears.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, June 24.—The killing of Gen. George A. Custer—massacred with all his men 59 years ago tomorrow—was "inadvertent," Barron Brown, an artist, said tonight he had been told by participating Sioux warriors.

Because of an earlier friendship, sitting bull had ordered the general's life be spared, Brown was told by Little Soldier and other survivors of that yelling band which defeated Custer at the battle of Little Big Horn.

"He was the last of the command to be killed," Brown was informed. "his death was inadvertent."

Brown said he had broken down the stony silence of the red man, long walling in many interesting sidelights of "Custer's last stand," while painting portraits on the Standing Rock reservation in North Dakota. There resides more than 20 participants in the famous battle.

They told him:

Contrary to common belief there was another survivor on Custer's side in addition to Commanche, famous horse of Capt. Myles W. Keogh. A yellow dog, which had followed Custer's men, scampered off the field after the battle—but never was seen again.

Rain-in-the-Face did not cut the heart out of Tom Custer, the general's brother, as some reports have stated.

The Sioux warriors did not mutilate their victims. That was done later by the old women and the youngsters.

Custer was not scalped. He had his long curly locks sheared off before the battle.

The reason the Indians stripped the whites of clothing was because they believed it would be needed during the retreat into Canada.

The forces under Marcus A. Reno, junior major of the Seventh Cavalry, could have been destroyed as effectively as was Custer's—but Sitting Bull interposed.

Had Reno not struck at the Indians, then in general retreat, they would not have attacked Custer at all.

Many of the Indians were equipped with Army rifles sold to them by dishonest Government agents.

Brown said that when he first met Little Soldier, "big, tall, somber, dignified, a veritable 'old Roman' of his people," there was only the brief exchange: "How."

But once the portrait was finished Little Soldier looked, exclaimed "um," went away and then returned.

"Some day eat dog with me," Little Soldier invited. And friendship invited confidence.

Labor Council Weighs Strike Plan in Tacoma

Moves to Retaliate for Attempted Break-up of Lumber Walk-out.

By the Associated Press.

Tacoma, Wash., June 24.—The Tacoma Central Labor Council was reported considering a general strike tonight in retaliation for the attempted break-up of the Northwest's lumber strike.

The reports spread after steel-helmeted National Guardsmen and State police scattered pickets today and permitted reopening of Tacoma sawmills. Guardsmen were armed with bayonets. Police swung clubs and threw tear gas.

Meanwhile, shipping was virtually at a standstill as longshoremen refused to load ships as long as National Guardsmen are in the city.

Five longshoremen on their way to work were gassed by State police when they cleared the Eleventh street bridge, dock workers asserted. The bridge crosses one section of the water front.

Manned by skeleton crews, six Tacoma sawmills resumed work on a limited basis. Huge truckloads of sawdust, guarded by National Guardsmen, roared over the Eleventh Street Bridge, which was established as a "no man's land" by the troopers.

Several hundred pickets were driven across the bridge by the State police and guardsmen early in the day. Tear bombs were discharged as far in the business district as the Federal Building and the pickets were broken up into small groups throughout that section.

None was injured in the clash between authorities and the pickets. Several were arrested by the State police when they refused to move.

The situation was quiet after the pickets were driven from the bridge.

Mrs. English Given Chance to Recover

Mrs. Lucille T. English, 29, who jumped from the window of her fifth-story apartment at the Embassy Towers, 1620 Fuller street northwest, Friday afternoon, was still alive at Emergency Hospital last night, and it began to appear that she might survive her many injuries.

When she was found in a thin hedge after her plunge, it was thought that it would be only a matter of hours until she died. She suffered a broken spine, a broken jaw, two crushed ribs and other injuries.

Talking Saturday to detectives and to her husband, Lieut. Robert English, U. S. N., commander of Admiral Byrd's polar flagship, the injured woman exonerated Harold Wayne Starr, 26-year-old lawyer, of any blame in connection with her jump. Starr has resumed the task of liquidating the affairs of his particular division under NRA.

AAA to Call Vote On Tobacco Plans

By the Associated Press.

Plans for referenda in July for growers of three types of tobacco to determine whether they want adjustment programs in 1936 were announced yesterday by the AAA.

Growers of burley, fire-cured and dark air-cured tobacco will participate. The AAA said a decision to conduct the balloting was reached after conferences with growers' advisory committees. The final voting will be July 27.

A similar referendum is being conducted among flue-cured tobacco growers, with June 29 as the final day for voting.

The announcement said persons eligible to vote include all share tenants, share croppers, renters and land owners engaged in the production of one or more of these types of tobacco, regardless of whether they have signed adjustment contracts.

Meat Packers File AAA Suit In Baltimore

Ruling on Processing Taxes Sought Before Congress Acts.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 24.—Another suit assailing the constitutionality of the agricultural adjustment act was filed in Federal District Court here today. It was brought against Lewis M. Milbourne, acting collector of internal revenue, for William Schluderberg-T. J. Kurdle Co., meat packers.

As did an earlier action filed for John A. Gebelein Co. and not yet decided by the court, the suit alleged the AAA's hog processing taxes were unconstitutional and improperly assessed.

Both suits were brought by the same group of attorneys—J. Willison Smith, jr., James A. Montgomery, jr., Humbert B. Powell and former Senator George Wharton Pepper, all of Philadelphia, and John Holt Richardson.

Richardson said the last suit was one of a number being filed throughout the Nation by the group in the hope of obtaining redress for clients before the final enactment of a new measure before Congress. He said the new measure would eliminate the alleged unconstitutionality of the present law and provide that packers who had paid its levies can not recover.

In the local suit the processing tax was asserted to be an "invalid means to accomplish an illegal end," violating the fifth amendment by taking property without due process of the law.

"The proceeds of such tax," the suit alleged, "are not levied for general revenue or for public purpose; on the contrary, the former action is an arbitrary levy upon one class of citizens for the benefit of another class."

Parent Group Might Re-Elect All Officers

Special Meeting Planned to Settle Dispute of Legality.

Re-election of all officers of the Prince Georges County Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations was suggested yesterday as a means of settling the dispute over the legality of recent elections.

Shirley Seward, former recording secretary of the federation, offered the suggestion after threatening an injunction suit against the federation on the grounds that present officials were not legally elected.

The suggestions, contained in a letter to the board of education, were that Louis A. Day, whom he says is still president, appoint a corresponding secretary to serve until Mrs. Fern Moseley, of Beltsville, can be regularly elected. Mrs. Moseley resigned the office June 29, 1934.

Also that a meeting of the 17 affiliated groups be called by Day for the purpose of authorizing the election of officers, or to consider the dissolution of the federation and the liquidation of the treasury funds.

The final suggestion was that Day, in lieu of the proposed meeting, call a special one for the specific purpose of electing officers.

20 Years' Experience Proves CONCRETE Best for County Roads

BEGINNING twenty years ago Vermilion County, Illinois, built over 145 miles of 10-foot concrete roads. Every citizen interested in the "low-cost-road problem" should know these facts:

1. The pavements, now paid for and bonds retired, are in excellent condition and will give many more years of service. They've required very little maintenance.

2. Vermilion County like many other counties has proved that pavements of this width are safe and convenient. Farmers with heavy loads have concrete all the way to town. And driving back, even on busiest days, they keep 4 wheels on the concrete 90% of the way.

3. As traffic increased many miles have been widened to 18 and 20 feet, with no sacrifice of investment, helping the county build up its present fine road system. The conclusion is plain. Residents along secondary roads carrying as few as 100 vehicles a day save money on concrete. Since you prefer to drive on concrete and since it is the pavement of lowest cost, why not demand concrete?

Fairfax to Test Plan to Assist 'Out-of-School'

Board Decides to Conduct Experiments This Fall for the State.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The school board of Fairfax County, co-operating with the State board of education, plans to conduct experiments this fall for the out-of-school movement. The experiments are intended to assist young people between 14 and 24 who have dropped out of school to obtain further training.

Following a county census of all those who would fall in the classification of the movement, made in connection with the regular county school census this spring, it was decided that Fairfax should be one of the several counties in Virginia where the movement would be tried.

As a preliminary step a training meeting for those who will assist in the movement will be held at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, July 22 to August 17.

Study of the recent survey reveals training could be roughly classified as follows:

Home economics, including work in clothing, foods and home industry.

Farm mechanics, including automobile and gasoline engines, farm machinery repair, radio and elementary electricity.

Social science, including vocational counseling and guidance forums on civics and social problems.

Recreation, including music and dramatics.

ProposalOutlined in Letter to Maryland Board.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 24.—An enlargement of the Capital Transit Co.'s plan for the substitution of bus for street railway service on the outskirts of Washington was requested in a letter received today from J. H. Hanna, president, by the Maryland Public Service Commission.

A petition by the company was entered recently for authority to eliminate street-car service between Chevy Chase Circle and Chevy Chase Lake. The additional service would run from the latter point to Kensington.

The Kensington and Sandy Spring Railway has asserted it will discontinue service when the transit company makes its other changes. The Kensington Chamber of Commerce wrote the commission it would oppose the Capital Transit Co.'s petition unless it included the newly proposed extension.

Health Groups Urge Program In Montgomery

Committees Would Place County Department Under Civil Service.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Separation of public health work from politics in Montgomery County, Md., was urged in resolutions adopted yesterday by a joint meeting of the advisory health committee and the Public Health Lay Council held in the County Building at Bethesda, Md.

It was the consensus of the meeting that all appointments to the county health department should be placed on a civil service basis after competitive examinations in which qualifications should have a large part.

It was pointed out that the county school budget had been greatly increased because of the influx of children into the county occasioned by the boom in real estate and homes and that the health department was being asked to care for this increase with deeply curtailed funds.

A committee consisting of Dr. Benjamin C. Perry, chairman of the advisory committee, and Mrs. J. Angus Watson, chairman of the lay group and three other members of the two bodies was authorized to confer with the Montgomery County commissioners on better understanding by that body of the needs for health work in the county.

The committee will ask the commissioners to consult with the United States Public Health Service as to advisability of placing the health department employes under the civil service and to work out a plan whereby the county commissioners would appoint a sanitary inspector who would be recognized by the Public Health Service.

The latter would return to the county the $1,500 allotment from the Public Health Service and the portion of the State allotment of $3,000 which was cut off when the present sanitary inspector was appointed after both the Federal and State health groups had declared him not properly qualified.

County Commissioner Charles E. King, health commissioner, who was largely responsible for appointment of the present inspector and who was instrumental in the drastic cut in the health department budget by the county commissioners, did not attend the meeting. Instead, a communication was received which asked that a committee of the group go to Rockville to confer with the county commissioners.

It is planned to ask the commissioners to care for the needs of the health department through the contingent fund, if possible, in order that the program of health work be not interfered with.

Dr. J. N. Morris was a member of the Maryland Psychiatric Society and of the American Physiatric Association.

Counsel Ready To Give Jurors Audit on Taxes

Pugh Expects to Submit Data in Montgomery Treasurer Case.

State's Attorney James H. Pugh is preparing to present to the Montgomery County grand jury the results of the audit of the books of County Treasurer J. Forest Walker, turned over to him by Edward Peter, counsel for the Montgomery County commissioners.

Pugh said yesterday he expected to present the audit to the grand jury for its information. He made plain there is no charge of embezzlement involved, but merely a question of whether the treasurer had failed to abide by the requirements of his office by not advertising properties on which taxes had not been paid.

The audit alleged a failure to account for approximately $80,000 in taxes which should have been collected according to the taxable basis of the county. Considerable of this, however, is believed to be accounted for by front-foot benefit charges, which were not collectible because of a moratorium declared by the State Legislature.

Walker "Ready."

Walker has announced he will show that his books are in order when the proper time comes. He refused to accept orders from the county commissioners to report on the taxes, declaring the commissioners had no authority over him.

The county treasurer asserted the shortage would be accounted for in insolvencies and other legal chargeoffs.

Pugh conferred Friday with a member of the Baltimore company which made the audit of Walker's accounts.

Walker's accounts will be checked shortly by the State auditor and the results are expected to have considerable bearing on the case.

Charges Motive.

Walker charged at the time the audit results were made public that they had been "concocted" to discredit him with the bonding companies, so that he would be unable to obtain bond and qualify within the time limit required by law. He made bond, however, on the last day of grace, after the bonding company had investigated the charges and his office.

Had Walker been unable to make bond and qualify, the Fusion Party, which controls the county commissioners, would have been able to name a member of its own ranks to replace Walker, who is an organization Democrat.

Crash Killing Baby Being Investigated

Montgomery County police are investigating an accident Sunday in which a 6-month-old baby was killed near Dawsonville, Md.

The child was killed when an automobile driven by his father, Spencer Conley, of near Dawsonville, ran off the road, up a bank, then turned over. The family was pinned in the car until a 10-year-old son managed to wriggle through the door and run to the nearby home of Dr. Upton Nourse.

The mother, Mrs. Nina Conley, suffered a broken arm and shock and bruises. The baby, Sidney Conley, was dead when the doctor examined him. The 10-year-old son was cut on the head. The father escaped injury.

Funeral services for the child were held yesterday with burial in the Darnestown Presbyterian Cemetery.

Beating of 5 Seamen Laid to Coast Strike

Baltimore, June 24 (AP).—Five seamen were beaten by a mob of about 40 others here today in what police said they believed was a flare-back from a recent seamen's strike in California.

One of those attacked was Chester Lamb, 38, a Federal licensed pilot of New York. Lamb said he believed he was a victim of mistaken identity, as the other men beaten were all Californians and members of the crew of the Cathwood, a California oil tanker which docked here today.

"Dodge Saves Money Every Mile," says Bernice Claire

Bernice Claire, star of the picture, "Song of the Flame," featured singer in radio's famous "Waltz Time" program, says: "When I learned that the big, good-looking Dodge gets more than 20 miles per gallon, I realized by driving a Dodge you can save money every mile."

From coast to coast, the good news is spreading—that here, at last, is a big car that gives amazing economy.

Owners report getting up to 20 miles—and more—on a gallon of gas. They say oil costs are negligible. They say Dodge costs less to run than lower-priced, competitive cars.

Imagine the money savings possible through such economy! And, in addition, imagine the extra satisfaction you get through owning a car that's as big and as good-looking as this New-Value Dodge! And now Dodge delivers for just a few dollars more than the lowest-priced cars.

Roosevelt Asks For Action Now On Wealth Tax

to press for action the recommendations of the President as to the amendments to the tax law at the present session.

"The chairman of the Finance Committee, Mr. Harrison, will ask his committee to consider the subject with a view to proposing amendments to the joint resolution extending certain taxes and with a view to adding these amendments to the joint resolution."

Senator Robinson declined to make any further statement and pushed through the crowd of newspapermen to his automobile. Other members of the conference likewise hurried away. Speaker Byrns, however, revealed that all the proposals made by the President in his message to Congress Wednesday would be included in the proposed amendment, except that for a constitutional amendment eliminating tax-exempt bonds.

"What if this plan fails—will the President's tax program be dead until next winter?" Senator Harrison was asked.

"Congress will not adjourn until disposing of the President's proposals," the finance chairman replied as his automobile started off.

Earlier in the day Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., when asked about the tax program, said that "we have had our home work done for several weeks." He added that he meant the Treasury would be prepared to submit to congressional committees, when asked, schedules of proposed rates to carry out the President's program, along with estimates of probable additional revenue.

It is expected that the Finance Committee today will ask the Treasury to submit these proposals at once. But it is clear that if action on the program is expected this week or even in two weeks, extensive hearings can not be held.

Before the White House conference Senator Robinson said he thought consideration of the tax program at this time would extend the present session for at least one month, while several House leaders thought it would take six weeks to frame a bill after hearings were completed. At all events, the prospect then was that Congress would be in session until late August or September.

It is known that Chairman Doughton suggested at the White House conference that Congress complete the present "must" program as speedily as possible and take a recess until November, with the Ways and Means Committee in the meanwhile at work formulating a bill to meet the President's objectives.

President Roosevelt, it was reported, summarily rejected this proposal, telling the congressional leaders that such a delay would create doubt as to his sincerity in proposing his share-the-wealth program. He is reported to have insisted that Congress proceed at once to consideration of the proposals.

In The Wrong Bailiwick.

Through courtesy the chairmen of both the Senate and House District Committees are often referred to as the mayors of Washington. Representative Norton and Senator King should be careful not to accept these pleasantries too literally.

In criticizing the District's Board of Public Welfare for recommending appointment of H. E. Donnell to succeed Capt. Barnard as superintendent of the local penal institutions, Mrs. Norton clearly stepped out of her proper role as chairman of a legislative committee. The appointive power is an executive function. In this case it must be exercised by the District Commissioners on recommendation of the Board of Public Welfare. It is unfortunate that any member of Congress should attempt to interfere.

Without reference to the qualifications of any candidate to succeed Capt. Barnard, the public will doubtless be gratified to learn that he will retain his post for the present, in spite of his advanced age. When it is necessary to make a change, however, that should be left entirely in the hands of local authorities. They alone are responsible to the President for the efficient administration of the local government. That responsibility ought not to be diffused.

Senator King took advantage of a meeting of his committee to lecture the Commissioners and other District officials on several local matters. While his interest in affairs of the Capital, like that of Mrs. Norton, is much appreciated, no official should overlook the constitutional division of powers, which operates in the case of the District as well as any other political unit. If the miscalled "mayors" will merely keep the crude legislative machinery of the District working smoothly, Washington's own executive officials will be entirely capable of handling administrative matters.

Encouraging Signs in Mexico.

It is not the fact that 15,000 Catholics recently paraded in Mexico City to protest against religious persecution which is surprising. Plenty of grounds for such a demonstration exist. More striking is the report that, although permission to march had not even been granted, repression was not in evidence. The paraders marched past the National Palace, chanting the national anthem, and then proceeded to the headquarters of the International Rotary convention, where speakers addressed the visitors in English. One lone march was arrested, when he shouted for the death of President Cardenas.

In the light of recent political developments in Mexico this tolerant attitude is the more encouraging. It appears that the role assumed by Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles for the past eight years is played out. The former "iron man" of Mexico has vehemently attacked the radicalism of Cardenas, but the upshot has been the discomfiture of the patron rather than the curbing of the pupil. Until Calles' attack on Cardenas collapsed the full strength of the latter's hold on the reins of power was never revealed.

This news is now followed by reports that at least one Mexican state is permitting the return of exiled priests and that some of the most bitterly anti-Catholic officials are being retired from high positions in the Federal Government. If Cardenas can follow his victory over Calles with a victory over the persecution tendencies in his own regime he will deserve well of Mexican history. The combination of absolute authority and moderate policy has been all too rare in that record. No sign from across the Rio Grande could be more healthy than indications that Cardenas, in the flush of personal victory, is big enough to profit from criticism which has the best interests of the country at heart.

Negation Of Representation.

The omission of roll calls at the time the House passed the controversial AAA amendments and the Wagner labor bill is regarded as evidence that a good many members were not at all anxious to have their votes recorded. A shouted yes or no is much less conspicuous and much sooner forgotten than a printed statement indicating plainly the position taken on a particular question. The lack of such a record, however, deprives voters of one of the most effective means of testing the men whom they have elected to office.

The practice of publishing the voting line-up in House and Senate in the daily press, and of compiling records of candidates for re-election, has been an invaluable guide to intelligent and conscientious voters who value principles above men. If legislators deliberately make it more difficult for their constituents to know what position they have taken on issues of real moment, they in effect abdicate their representative functions.

Legislative cowardice is a more dangerous enemy of democracy than outright dishonesty. The venal man is always discovered and in course of time loses his power to harm. The man who boldly expresses his views and stands by his opinions when the test comes need never be feared. If he does not represent the views of his constituents, he will be forced to retire from office. If his record meets with their approval, his influence will be enhanced by the publicity attaching to all his acts.

At all times frankness is essential to the maintenance of that sense of legislative responsibility without which so-called representative government would become a sham.

Planless Taxation.

Senator Borah has joined the progressive bloc urging passage at this session of new tax levies in accordance with President Roosevelt's suggestions. Mr. Borah rightly emphasizes the importance of taking care of a greater proportion of our huge expenditures by voting new taxes. He is fully justified in denouncing "the unconscionable system of passing expenditures over to our children and our children's children in the way of bonds and interest."

But just because the senior Senator from Idaho so clearly perceives the need for a "just and timely" readjustment of our tax laws that will be productive of needed revenue, it is surprising that he should regard the President's tax message as a program designed to further the objectives which he has so clearly defined. Indeed the miscellaneous recommendations proposed by the President do not really deserve to be dignified by the name of "program."

There is no indication that the new taxes are designed to fit into any well-coordinated plan of equitable taxation. The mere fact that some of the Senators who are pressing for action want to attach a tax bill as a rider to the resolution extending the nuisance taxes indicates the extent to which some are willing to carry irresponsibility in this field. Incidentally, of course, such a method of procedure would violate the provision of the Constitution that all bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House.

Senator Borah optimistically assumes that increased taxes levied on large incomes, corporations and inheritances would offset various indirect taxes which fall upon the less well to do. He notes that all winter long the States have been voting sales taxes which "soak the poor." We are left to infer that the President's proposals would be in the nature of a compensation for these heterogeneous levies, which less than half the States even now impose. But the compensation will be very theoretical if the new program merely increases business uncertainty without stimulating receipts.

A Federal tax system apportioning the burden of government costs in accordance with individual ability to pay is the proper goal of Congress. But to secure this equitable sharing of burdens it is necessary to take a larger view of the tax problem than is now envisaged. What the country needs is a new tax deal, a complete overhauling of the present system with a view to obtaining maximum revenues from all classes. That the President's rambling suggestions can be translated into such practical reforms at this session of Congress is in the highest degree unlikely. Here is preeminently a subject in which it would be ultimately disastrous to put action ahead of thought.

Death And Horsepower.

Summer is here and with it the regular week-end holocaust of automobile accidents. The record of that just past gives ominous forecast of those to come: locally, three killed outright, a fourth dead of injuries and more than a score seriously hurt.

Running through the reports is the frequent note that "the machine was traveling at a high rate of speed." The very repetition serves to raise a question that can not be ignored. On every hand there are traffic surveys, safety devices and police supervision. But many are coming to believe that all these miss the heart of the problem.

Does the solution lie rather in the curtailment, voluntary or otherwise, of the tremendous power with which modern automobiles are equipped? Is it the well-nigh irresistible power to speed, not the lack of rule or regulation, that is converting the country's roadways into avenues of death?

The Celler Bill.

The New York State Chamber of Commerce some time ago petitioned Congress to pass the Celler bill providing for the publication of all future executive orders, rules and regulations in a daily Federal Register. Existing orders would also be codified, classified and indexed.

The chaos created by administrative lawmaking was brought frequently and often painfully to the attention of business men during the heyday of the NRA. In the first year of its operation, for instance, the so-called recovery administration issued nearly 3,000 orders. It is estimated that its edicts, which until recently had the force of law, would have filled 10,000 pages of a law manual—a volume greater than the total of statutory law in the United States Code.

The decision in the Schechter case wiped out these supposed laws instantaneously, but a multitude of other administrative orders, decrees, rules and regulations remain in force and are increasing at a rapid rate as new control agencies of both a temporary and permanent nature are created. The Interstate Commerce Commission, the Federal Trade Commission, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration and the Securities and Exchange Commission are only a few of the many Federal organizations empowered to issue rules and regulations carrying penalties for non-observance.

As the New York Chamber of Commerce states, officials of the Government departments responsible for these regulations are often ignorant of their existence. In the circumstances, the average citizen certainly can not be expected to be aware of their provisions. Yet he may be subjected to fines, even imprisonment, for unwitting violation of some unknown Federal order. It is an intolerable situation which should be remedied without delay.

Systematic publication of orders and decrees, following the practice of other countries, would undoubtedly be a step in the right direction. The Celler bill attempts to meet this need, and in the words of the Special Committee on Law Reform of the New York Chamber of Commerce, tries to remove a "condition of hopeless confusion entailing actual danger to citizens of the entire country."

NRA And FTC.

The reconciliation effected between the Federal Trade Commission and the NRA is a natural outcome of the changed status of the latter organization. So long as a powerful "recovery" agency was engaged in administering codes, many of which conflicted with former prohibitions of the antitrust laws, harmony could not be expected to prevail. The Federal Trade Commission still was charged with responsibility for seeing that the antitrust laws were obeyed. Consequently, the vague phrasing of the recovery act, permitting partial suspension of these laws, gave rise to differing interpretations. Moreover, the Trade Commission was disposed to resent being relegated to a position of comparative obscurity when the NRA first began to function.

With the disappearance of compulsory codes and the establishment of a new NRA with merely advisory powers, the Federal Trade Commission can afford to be cooperative. It has been restored to its old position of primacy in dealing with organized industrial groups and trade associations. It has had a long and checkered career in trying to accommodate rules of fair practice to the needs of industry without inviting rebukes from the Department of Justice. Since the antitrust laws are again effective, the commission will have to struggle with familiar problems in passing upon the validity of voluntary NRA agreements.

Many industries will doubtless be encouraged to submit voluntary codes for consideration, once assured that the Government's regulatory agencies have ceased to work at cross-purposes. The chief danger now is that the reorganized NRA will do little or nothing to forward these efforts in the field of individual self-government.

If that should be the policy the inevitable result will be the disappearance of the constructive accomplishment achieved under the codes. For while the Federal Trade Commission can prevent business cooperation which is of antisocial intent, its powers are negative rather than positive. The blessing of the restricted NRA must not be withheld from code authorities if the hope of social progress embodied in the original Blue Eagle is to be maintained.

De Senectute.

Montaigne only echoed Cicero when he wrote: "There is no man so decrepit, whilst he has Methuselah before him, who does not think he has still 20 years of life in his body." Now it seems that the day is at hand when the oldest gaffer need not be disappointed. Scientists at the Moscow Institute of Experimental Medicine are led to believe that X-ray treatments can extend man's mental life to 150 or 180 years. At least, in experiments with lower animals they have succeeded in prolonging life by as much as four times the normal span.

All this is intensely interesting to those who have plotted their careers on the traditional three-score-and-ten basis. Indeed, there is no end to the implications of the Russian "discovery." Barring deleterious influences to wear out the body, a man could expect to live through six or seven generations. All manner of readjustment would be necessary. The little matter of nomenclature, for instance, would be a problem. Richard Roe, Sr., Jr., III and IV would all be cluttering the earth simultaneously.

There is another grave angle to be considered. The manufacturers of the Rolls-Royce take pride in their ability to construct an automobile that will last 30 years or so, given proper treatment. To their disgruntlement, however, they find that body styles change so rapidly that what may be the most distinguished model in 1935 will be hopelessly outdated in 10 years, let alone 30. Will not the relentless march of time similarly relegate future sesquicentenarian bodies to the oblivion of old-age homes? As vintners will testify, there is such a thing as overaging.

Some such thought must have run through Emerson's mind when he discussed the compensations of senescence in his careful journal:

> Old age brings along with its ugliness the comfort that you will soon be out of it . . . To be out of the war, out of debt, out of the drought, out of the blues, out of the dentist's hands, out of the second thoughts, mortifications and remorses that inflict such twinges and shooting pains—out of the next winter and high prices!

Horse sense: Horses run races, but they don't bet on them.

The amazing progress of baseball in Russia has encountered an unexpected obstacle. The boys balk at calling the robber "Comrade Umpire."—Atlanta Constitution.

Where Was The Error?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a Republican and chairman of the publicity committee of the Republican Club of the Thirteenth District of Montgomery County, I wish to state that I am much surprised at the article that appeared on the editorial page of your paper on the 22d of June, headed "Confusionists."

As an editorial, one would think that you had carefully looked into the facts before committing your paper to an erroneous statement concerning the Montgomery County government. Evidently you did not. If you had, the article as printed would never have appeared.

I do believe if you want the patronage of the majority of the people in our county (as it took the majority of the vote to break the Democratic organization and elect the Fusion Party, who are now in control) it would be wise to obtain and print the facts.

Yours for truth and cooperation,
SIDNEY M. OLIVER,
Chairman, Publicity Committee, Republican Club of the Thirteenth District, Montgomery County, Md.

Investors' Importance.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: American common sense must be used to get us out of the depression. If not, the country will be like Mexico, run for radical labor agitators, too lazy to work.

President Cardenas says the new laws in Mexico were designed to "impede conflicts between capital and labor." Calles says the labor laws are going to ruin investors who make any country. They made America. INVESTOR.

Lindbergh's Invention.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Col. Lindbergh thrills us again—I hope. Does anybody consider him out of place in the field of biology alongside the famed Dr. Alexis Carrel? Biology has been pointed to by modern savants as the field in which invention will most influence civilization in the near future. Already biological research has produced and will produce remarkable potential benefits to mankind, but the application thereof may need such a figure as Col. Lindbergh to capture the popular imagination.

The new invention for artificial blood circulation about which we have recently read in the pages of The Post is likely to be an important step toward not only the cure of cancer and other diseases but toward some developments barely conceivable at present to the lay mind. H. L. SHATFORD.

Arlington County Slums.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The District of Columbia has taken a stand to remove the alley dwellers of Washington to more healthful surroundings. Arlington County, Va., has also a slum problem, one that should be changed as this slum problem is in the shadow of our national shrine, the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, at the gates of Arlington National Cemetery.

From the airport to Arlington Ridge road there is an opportunity for improvement. Citizens residing along Columbia Pike and visitors who drive over this road are aware of this slum district. With millions to spend the United States Government, the State government, and county government should get together and devise ways and means of improving this section of Arlington County.

The Example Of England.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On Wednesday last President Roosevelt sent to the Congress his so-called "tax message." Since that time all other subjects of conversation have been secondary when groups get together, and probably will be until after the next Presidential election.

The President was forced to send this message to Congress because it is imperative that huge sums of money must be raised in order to take care of the great annual governmental expenditures and the fast mounting national debt. Some of the people now complaining the most are those people who were most bitter in their condemnation of our late war President and who berated him early and late, in and out of season, for not getting us into the war. Now the war is over and we are still paying the piper.

We are now arrived at the same stage that England faced directly after the war. She imposed taxes upon her people, sick and worn after four bitter, heart-breaking years, and then imposed more and more taxes. They faced the inevitable. Perhaps no people in the world have ever been more heavily taxed, and they assumed these heavy burdens cheerfully, like the good sports that they are. England has not gone to the devil, but, on the contrary, is fast emerging from the depression and its unbearable tax assessments. Had it not been for England and other nations for protecting our great fortunes during the World War, we might not now have any fortunes to tax.

Instead of bleating like a lot of sheep being led to the slaughter, why not get behind the President in his efforts to wipe out the public debt and take care of the people in this country that must be cared for, shoulder our tax burdens and march on, determined to accomplish as much as England and some of the other European countries have done. The majority of the people in this country felt we must be participants in the Great War. They got their wish, and now let's face the music and get ourselves out of the mess. MISS F. L. PARKER.

Go South!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Ten days ago I was in Virginia and visited a deserted farm of 95 acres. It included a six-room house with barns, etc., and was just outside Richmond on the Florida highway. The land is so rich no fertilizer would be needed to cultivate it. It can be rented for $30 a month, yet there are no takers. And there are thousands of such farms all over the South.

Hy Hopkins should help people to plant there. There are no more jobs in the cities; modern mass-production machinery can supply in four months all necessities for four years. A. J. WARREN.

Appreciation.

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: I think a note of thanks is due Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer for their efforts, through The Post, to be helpful to the people of Washington. Particularly in arranging the series of travel talks with their excellent pictures, at a price so reasonable nearly everyone could enjoy them. And especially in sponsoring the Independent Artist Exhibition, which has given such an impetus to those who are venturing creative work. C. L.

Minority Report On Alien Deportation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With reference to the so-called Administration alien deportation bill, introduced by Congressman J. H. Kerr, of North Carolina, and seven times redrafted by the Department of Labor, H. R. 8163, ordered reported by the House Committee on Immigration, 9 to 3, the day it was introduced, May 22, the "views" and "report" of the six members of the committee that signed, are far more definite, factual and conclusive than the "majority report" by Mr. Kerr and unsigned by any other member.

The minority report by Congressman Starnes annihilates the allegation that the Kerr bill (H. R. 8163) is an "Administration" measure by quoting the opposition of the Department of State.

It seems to me the minority sums up the whole bill in its discussion of Section 11 when they declare: "We are opposed to any such permanent substitution of an administration of . . . persons for a Government by definite law," and that under it "immigration law enforcement might . . . and would vary from unmitigated harshness to unmitigated leniency, depending on an alien baiting or alien coddling attitude."

"Government by persons, 'well, say the minority,' is un-American and has always been unsatisfactofy to Americans. It has always, wherever tried, led to favoritism, graft and corruption, or persistent suspicions of such. Aliens, as well as citizens, should be able to learn and to know what the law is and to be able to depend on practices, precedents and equality of treatment. Congress should retain control of our immigration and deportation policies and any really meritorious deportation hardship cases or other relief should be presented to Congress for determination in the future as they have been in the past."

And their final conclusion that the Kerr bill "is essentially in the interest of and for the relief of aliens illegally and unlawfully here, and aliens who have not kept their temporary admission promises and have breached the very agreement by which they secured an easy temporary admission without even payment of head tax or being subjected to any real consular investigation or immigration" and that "the bill boldly and audaciously raises the issue of whether one is for or against Americans and law-abiding, law-observing aliens legally and lawfully in our country.

"The bill would decrease alien deportations and increase immigration and would substitute personal administration and personal government for definite administration by written law, definite practices and fixed precedents, and we therefore urge its defeat."

May the minority have its "urge."

The Post Impressionist

Concerning Timber Toes.

Post Office, Tuesday.

GENERALLY, Dr. William Lyon Phelps plays a hand at Column which is positively Culbertsonian; but he missed a trick in that recent article of his, on substitute nether extremities. He failed to lead from his strong suit when it was strong enough to have given him a grand slam.

He praised the wonders of Munich's leg-makers. Yet he said nothing on the rich subject of the "Artificial Leg in Literature."

When did this limb first tap its way down printed pages? It doesn't seem likely that Scott would have failed to pull its possibilities; but, at the moment, we can't recall his depicting any of them. It doesn't seem likely that Marryat could have resisted drawing a veteran guardian of Britain's wooden walls whose leg was shot away at Trafalgar and replaced by a spar of H. M. S. "Victory"—yet we confess to a very slight memory of Marryat.

That, however, is the limit of our confessions. We insist: The artificial leg, though infrequently hollow, is a literary gold mine.

It was almost literally a gold mine, in one case—and fatal to its owner.

Does nobody read Hood anymore? Or do those who read him, read only his songs of shirts and bridges of sighs and his briefer punning-poems? Although his longer verse was always sadly neglected, one lengthy poem of his, extremely popular with our grandparents, concerned itself entirely with "Miss Kilmansegg and Her Golden Leg."

"Who can forget," asked Stedman, "her auspicious pedigree, her birth, christening and childhood, her accident . . . her marriage a la mode, followed in swift succession by the Hogarthian pictures of her misery and death?"

Well, too many have forgotten them. But we'll tell you this much: her worthless husband beat her brains out with her precious leg.

And didn't Diskens tempt Dr. Phelps? Not the Golden Dustman and his "literary gentleman WITH a wood leg?" Dr. Phelps says a young man showed him "arms that bent easily at the elbow, and allowed the owner to move all the fingers . . . A good deal better than the old hook which we associate with piratical gentlemen." But what about Capt. Cuttle?

Two wooden legs of literature are certainly familiar to the youth of today—because, of course, they have passed out of literature and on to the screen. They used to belong to Herman Melville and Robert Louis Stevenson; they now belong to Lionel Barrymore and Wallace Beery: the wooden leg that Captain Ahab wore and the wooden leg that John Silver didn't, but that in a splendid passage, Jim Hawkins dreamed he did.

The Post-Impressionist saw Mme. Damala—Sarah Bernhardt, if you prefer—act before she lost a leg, and after. Bernhardt's genius wasn't in her toes.

Nor is the genius of a certain newspaper correspondent not unfamiliar with Pennsylvania Avenue. He lost a leg just after he had come out of the World War unscathed.

He wrote us from hospital:

"Isn't this the silliest thing for me to have let happen? Think of the narrow escapes we had where there was obvious danger—then think of me, sitting in a peace-time railway coach and seeing the nose of a locomotive coming right through the window.

"That was all I knew till I started to pick myself up from beside the tracks. I couldn't stand: I was shy a leg."

He lay a long time in a French hospital. He had not lain there long, however, before the railroad's claim-adjuster came to see him.

A most sympathetic man, that adjuster.

"You suffer?" he asked.

"Not much," said the sufferer, who would never admit that there was such a thing as pain—when it was his pain.

"But of course," continued the adjuster, "you will soon learn to use an artificial leg."

"Sure I will. They say that, when you get used to them, they're every bit as useful as the other kind—and a lot less trouble."

"Then," the adjuster suggested, "will you now accept this money and sign this paper releasing the road of all claims for damage?"

Our friend looked at the check. We think it was a much smaller check than he could have got at court. But our friend said "Sure" again. He said:

"Sure I'll sign. I never was a dancing-man, anyhow."

The friend is Walter Duranty, for years thereafter the best known correspondent at Moscow. They tell us that, whereas he started life with but two legs, he now has four: one of the British pair he was born with, an English artificial leg, a French artificial leg and a German artificial leg. Apparently he thinks that the Soviet artificial-leg manufacturers have still something to learn.

Bull Exercisers

GOOD morning, ladies and gentlemen of the radio audience, after a lapse of many weeks we again bring to you Mrs. Diebenkorfer, who will talk to you on "The many interesting things which men and women are doing in Our Government, Your Government and Mine." Mrs. Diebenkorfer:

Good morning, friends of the air: It goes without saying that I am charmed to come before you once again. My talks to you on "Our Government, Your Government and Mine" met with such a wholehearted response that I made up my mind to talk to you again—just as soon as I could find anything to talk about. Or perhaps, I should not put it that way. The men and women who are doing things in Our Government, Your Government and Mine, are really doing so many interesting things that one could talk all the time about them. My problem then, after deciding to continue my series of talks, was not to find something to talk about but to select a particular something to talk about. Ah, you see there is a difference.

This morning I shall tell you of the interesting work being done by Mr. Morris Cooke's rural electrification service. As you well know, a progressive government such as we have now under Mr. Roosevelt finds additional outlets for its endeavors as it moves along. That is to say, it creates one endeavor and then it finds this endeavor has created another one. And so forth and so on, as the great English poet says.

Thus it was when our President decided to electrify the rural areas he created an endeavor. From this endeavor there naturally arose the question of what the farmers would do with their electricity when they got it. You laymen know as well as we experts in Our Government, Your Government and Mine, that electricity will do the farmer no good unless he has something to do with it. This is what we came long ago to call manifest.

Oftentimes I think we experts are given too much credit for the things we think out, because any one of you, I dare say, could have figured out that if the farmer is to have electricity he must have something to do with it.

• • • •

It was in the field of exploration, that is to say, in our study of the purposes to which the farmer could put electricity, that we made the most interesting discoveries. We found, and it is perfectly alarming when we consider ours as one of the forward nations of the earth, that there are an amazing number of farms in this country which do not have electrically operated bull exercisers. Astonishing, isn't it? Put your coffee down for a minute and let this sink fully in. Try to imagine a nation so wealthy as ours and yet revealing a paucity of electrically operated bull exercisers.

Or does the enormity of this defect in our economic system strike you city folk? Perhaps you are ignorant of what an electrically operated bull exerciser is. I can probably best enlighten you by describing it as a bull exerciser operated by electricity. With this description I am sure you will agree with me that every farm should have one. If we are to look at it in a purely selfish aspect, then we will say that the farmers are entitled to their electric bull exercisers if industry is to have its tariff.

So when we created this need of the farmers for electric bull exercisers we opened up a hornet's nest of further endeavors, or to put it another way, another vast avenue for long range planning. I shall explain: If the farmers are to have electric bull exercisers dosen't it follow that they must have bulls to exercise

I shall put the question another way: Wouldn't it look ridiculous to have a lot of electric bull exercisers with no bulls to exercise? Why, we would be the laughing stock of the European nations which are so far ahead of us in planning and would continue to be ahead of us if Mr. Roosevelt had not fortunately been elected.

Now, naturally it will not be up to Mr. Cooke's electrification service to provide the bulls. His duty will be ended with the furnishing of electric bull exercisers. But, ah, here is where the coordination of Our Government, Your Government and Mine, comes in. There will be another agency to come along to supply the bulls. I thank you.

Thank you, Mrs. Diebenkorfer. When the gong strikes it will be half-past eight.

The Franc Enters Politics

Behind The May-Fly Existence Of French Cabinets Is A Stability Backed By A Conservative People, Wary Of The Class In Power And Warier Still Of Their Pocketbooks.

By Andre Vulliet.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

IT IS impossible not to be puzzled—not to say amused—by the extraordinarily rapid succession in which French cabinets rise and fall and by the remarkable reappearance in the limelight, almost every time, of the same politicians. The present French government, formed a few days ago in a critical situation, when everyone began to be fed up with the political game, is usually given four to six months of life by the press and public opinion alike. Considering that Parliament will soon adjourn for the summer, the cabinet will probably find easy sailing until the fall. Any prediction as to what is going to happen next is regarded here as sheer folly.

Such uncertainty is accepted by many with a sort of resignation as being part of the parliamentary game. They quote Clemenceau, the fierce fighter, who used to say: "I have overthrown 20 cabinets, but it was always the same one."

Yet, the present team, captained by clever, silent Foreign Minister Laval, is the ninety-ninth the French Republic has put at its helm since it saw the light of day 65 years ago. Since the war, however, the movement seems to have gained momentum as this was the tenth time a new cabinet had to face the stormy Chamber of Deputies issued from the last general elections of May, 1932.

An average life of four months per cabinet! The cabinet which immediately preceded the present one, headed by Speaker Boulsson, could not even last that long and was swept out of office after four hours.

• • • •

"THERE is nothing illogical in our system," a French official retorted jokingly the other day to an English correspondent, who was finding the French regime somewhat bewildering. "We find your system illogical," he continued, "and we can not understand how you can put up so long with a government which you no longer like."

The French situation does not justify such light optimism. Seen in the light of the intricacies of the French political game, it may appear not so bad as it looks—and for this reason it is well to sketch the functioning of the French parliamentary regime and political parties. But, in the main, it shows how far the present regime has gone from the original Republican ideal and how difficult it is for the French Parliament to cope with economic evils it was instrumental in bringing about.

The great characteristic of the French political structure is that the administration does not change with each new government. This explains why French politicians can play their favorite game without such damage as might be expected in any other nation. If the spoils system existed in France, the country would be a wreck in no time.

It may be said, in a way, that France's famous red tape and administrative routine help confer a marvelous stability upon the life of the most centralized country in the world.

• • • •

FRENCH ministers are appointed by the President of the French Republic, whose duty it is to pick out a premier most likely to obtain favorable votes from Parliament and to intrust him with the delicate task of forming the cabinet. It is this man's job to select a team which will meet with both the Chamber's and the Senate's approval.

Incidentally, it may be of interest to note that ministers must not necessarily be members of Parliament. Traditionally, however, most of them are, although there are a few exceptions such as Gen. Denain, the present air minister, or Marshal Petain, former war minister. Smiling Doumergue himself had been a retired old gentleman for a good many years when he was called back last year as French premier.

According to the French constitution, the ministers alone are "responsible," while the President of France is not. The latter, elected by the Chamber and the Senate assembled, wields no political power whatsoever, except that of sorting out a premier according to traditional customs, of appointing the ministers chosen by that premier and of presiding over the ministers' sittings. He never goes before Parliament, and addresses it no message.

"His" ministers go for him, as they are responsible "en bloc" before Parliament for the government's acts. They may be overthrown on a vote of confidence about the slightest question. As a matter of fact, French governments rarely fall on a technical matter. Their stumbling blocks are usually votes involving a question of general policy.

• • • •

IN a country where politics are the public occupation No. 1, politicians are always quite touchy about anything that might seem suspicious to the ideologic convictions of their constituents. The fiercest battles in France are fought about principles and with a profusion of ideologic lingo and a capacity for abstract representation which no foreigner can grasp.

The reason for this is that the majority of French voters still fear the return of reactionary power, as a great many people and social classes in France call themselves Republicans without being actually permeated with the very principle of the French revolution. Such, at least, is the opinion expressed in a remarkable book on French political parties by Mr. Andre Siegfried.

"The very essence of the republic (in the French sense)," Alain, a French philosopher, wrote in one of his books, "is the citizen against the powers, the fight of the small people against the big people."

One should never forget that this country has a 10-century-long past of central monarchical power with privileged classes, whose spirit, at least, is still surviving. The republic itself is never discussed, but rather the right for certain classes to lead the nation. That fight of the small people to affirm their "rights," at least oratorically, constitutes the corner stone of the French Republic's development. Even the religious question, so often raised and which has been the cause of so many dissensions under the Republican regime, partakes of the same idea, that of opposing the "popular right" against the "divine right."

IN France the word "doctrine" has much more electoral appeal than the word "platform." Political battles are fought and won on questions of principles and, out of conviction, most French people vote to the left. Consequently, as Mr. Siegfried points out, French political parties put on leftist labels and squeeze out every ounce of leftist phraseology.

There are some 20 French parties, all of which sound a lot more to the left than they actually are, from the Communists to the Democratic Republican Union. To a foreigner, a list of them all is both tiresome and absolutely meaningless. As Pierre Mille, a witty French writer, once put it: "There was a Socialist committee which was Republican, and a Republican committee which was Royalist."

Politically, the French are leftists and, according to Mr. Siegfried, "leftists instinctively mistake discipline for arbitrary powers, authority for tyranny and order for a form of reaction." Such a feeling, rigorously applied in the Chamber of Deputies, is one of the main causes which, every now and then, sends the French government toppling overboard.

Continuous Opera

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps.

THE TRAGIC suddenness of the death of Herbert Witherspoon at the outset of what was to be the climax of his splendid career has naturally directed universal attention to the future of grand opera in America; and the directors of the Metropolitan Opera House in New York have shown great wisdom in appointing Edward Johnson and Edward Ziegler to the vacant position.

The announcements already made, especially concerning the additional attention to be paid to American composers and American singers are highly interesting. Yet music is outside of national boundaries; and I would rather hear an opera by Wagner and singers from abroad, than inferior operas or inferior singers merely because they are American. I am glad, therefore, to learn that there is to be no change in producing the best operas and the best talent that can be found, no matter where its origin may be. It is the pursuit of this policy that has made the Metropolitan the world's leader.

Incidentally, we do not have to apologize for some singers because they are Americans. There is no greater baritone opera singer in the world than Lawrence Tibbett.

Yet if one compares the position taken in our national life by grand opera, with the position this great art holds in Germany, I need only remind my readers of my experience in Munich the last few weeks. The week from May 12 to May 19 included "Die Meistersinger," "Das Rheingold," "Die Walkuere," by Wagner; "Arabella," by Richard Strauss; "Martha" and "Il Trovatore"; Undine" and "A Night in Venice.

• • • •

I mentioned this in a recent article; but I wish to repeat it for the sake of emphasis. Let me remind my readers that this is nothing unusual; it is not in the opera season; there is no opera season in Munich. This is the daily food of the inhabitants. With the exception of the month of July, when I believe the opera house is closed while they are getting ready for the annual Wagner-Mozart Festival performances, grand opera is given in Munich every night including Sunday during the whole year. The house is usually crowded. The best seats are from a dollar and a half to nearly two dollars; but they are cheaper than that for the majority of the audience, since they are largely sold by subscription for the whole year.

It is easy enough to obtain the more expensive seats a day or two in advance.

Why Live Forever?

A CERTAIN doctor, a news item was pointing out the other day, has come forward with the discovery that a milk diet (I reduce his findings to a generality) will increase our life span ten years. He proved it on rats, or something on that order. What I would remark is that if his discovery is valid, then it is by all odds the greatest discovery of the century.

But I have my doubts—the science of human biology simply doesn't make such leaps. Of course, there is one school of embattled statisticians who will point out that in 1850 a new-born child had a life-expectancy of 35 years, and now the expectancy is some 20 years longer. Clear gain, we are all likely to shout, and at such a rate science will soon have us living forever! But wait a minute—in 1850 a person of 35 years might expect on the average to live 24 and three-tenths more years. And now, after 85 years of the most astonishing flowering of applied science the world has ever known, what is the gain in adult expectancy of life? Just, dear reader, an average of one-tenth of a year! For all of us who are past childhood, the labors of Pasteur and Koch, of Lister and Osler and Banting and all the rest of that noble brotherhood have bestowed upon us just five weeks more in which to draw breath.

NOW even if we could add ten years by a milk-sop diet, and another ten by means of some subtle control of the ductless glands, and still another ten through the removal of "heavy water" from the system, and so on by any means you can imagine, who would want to take advantage of it. Very few of us. For there's only one valid reason to live "forever."

We would get almighty tired of watching our great-grandchildren fall in love and marry (did you ever see a person over 60 who could endure reading novels of young romance?)—we would be bored to death by 90 years of collecting postage stamps or playing chess—we would simply froth at the mouth at the thought of 120 years of spring housecleaning.

And all that is left to satisfy an old lady or gentleman of 210 is what you might call a sort of cosmic curiosity.

I should like to be alive in A.D. 2145 only for such things as these: To see what happened to Italy after the demise of Il Duce and to Germany after the passing of Der Fuehrer; to observe how the oasis of Omaha (situated in the Great American Desert extending from Missouri to Montana) might get its water-supply; to find out whether Russia or Japan ruled Asia; to learn what finally became of the Republican Party; to discover how science concentrates a full meal into a capsule and grows babies in bottles; and to see, say, if Mr. Hilton's "Good-bye, Mr. Chips" is quite the "timeless enchantment" which a number of our present contemporaries are claiming.

• • • •

THOSE, and those only. And the thought of being far ahead and looking backward is really a most curious emotion, produced in me just now by reading one of the oddest periodicals of our time—"The World Today," the intermittent little journal of new and supplementary articles issued by the Encyclopedia Britannica. Odd, that is, because here are subjects still flourishing all about us and yet they are seen through the far, clear, detached eyes which might belong to an observer a century hence.

There is pesky little present emotion when we note "Adolf Hitler, Reichskanzler, under whom Germany is rapidly resuming the position occupied by her in 1914," or Sir Norman Angell's remark that the problem of peace is "to transfer power from the litigants to the law," or the o'er-topping stature of the late Mr. Justice Holmes or the four charted chromosomes of the fruit fly or K. Mikomoto's 40 years in perfecting artificial pearls or the death of a sequoia which was as large as a great oak when Christ was born or the reign of George V, great because he has maintained his majesty, is constitutional, is national, is the conciliator and is human ("This is my jubilee," he muttered, stamping out of the room when the Queen and Lord Dawson of Penn, his physician, tried to restrain his zest for celebrating it, "and I don't care—anything!—for what May and Dawson say about it!")

Yes, we should still be chuckling at 210. Here is Boston Latin School celebrating its 300th anniversary (it was there that John Hancock learned to put the flourish under his signature), the school which was looking for a new president a couple of years ago. Across the river in Cambridge there was a prepossessing chemist named Conant, but no, they wouldn't choose him—he wasn't well enough known. In 2145 I could still chortle over the fact that a couple of weeks later Harvard chose Dr. Conant for its president, and was Boston Latin's face red!

Crashes Injure 10 Near Frederick

2 Nurses Hurt When Cars Collide on Pike.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., June 24. — Ten persons were injured in auto accidents in this section over the week-end. Two hospital nurses, Miss Ruth Weybright and Miss Romaine Valentine, received the most severe injuries of five persons hurt, when two autos collided on the Georgetown Pike, a mile south of Frederick Junction, Sunday night. Miss Valentine suffered a broken nose and Miss Weybright lacerations. Roland Bragan, driver of the car, son of C. J. Bragan, superintendent of Buckingham School, Buckeystown, received a lacerated hand and broken rib, and Stokes Engle, this city, was lacerated about the face and head. Thomas Sullivan, driver of the other car, escaped with slight injuries. Both machines were wrecked. Charges of reckless driving were placed against the drivers.

Autos driven by Howard J. Lease, Monrovia, and a Mr. Chaffoinch, Baltimore, collided at a curve on the State road near Ridgeville, yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Chaffoinch were cut about the face and head and were taken to the City Hospital. Charles Holland, 17, in the car with Lease, also was taken to the hospital with a fractured arm and lacerations. Lease was charged with driving without a license and reckless driving.

Mrs. William Ogle, of near this city, was hurt in a peculiar accident Saturday night. An auto driven by John E. Williams, near Jamsville, ran into an oil can in front of the filling station of Mrs. Ogle. The can struck Mrs. Ogle, knocking her down.

$119,008 in Taxes Due Cumberland

$182,534 in Water Levies Also Uncollected.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., June 24.—A report of Cumberland finances shows $119,008.36 in uncollected taxes, while in the water department the total due is $182,534.61. Despite this, collections have been better than the previous year, Auditor Frank A. Wolfhope's report stated.

The water department shows an operating profit of $30,728.26 for the year, compared with a loss of $1,580.33, the previous year, a profit of $3,584.67 for 1932-33 and a loss of $60,035.16 in 1931-32.

Increased water rates in recent years have helped offset the loss. In 1932-33 industries paid $44,992.61 for water, while last year the report shows $69,290.27 was paid.

The city's consolidated cash report shows that $1,570,686.05 was handled during the 12 months. One-third of this amount was from the sale of bonds. The city's cash balance for all purposes, as of April 1, is shown as $289,573.39, due to large bond issues, compared with a cash balance of $7,151.27 at the end of the previous year.

During the year $5,806.45 was collected in Sunday motion picture taxes, of which amount $4,946.19 was expended for various charitable purposes. There is a balance in the account of $4,197.46, of which $3,337.20 was carried as a balance from last year.

General Fries Named to Head Study of Labor

Committee to Seek Effect of NRA Decision on Trade Practice.

Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, of Washington, was named yesterday to head an NRA committee to study the effects on labor and trade practice standards of the Supreme Court decision outlawing codes. The appointment was made by James L. O'Neill, NRA administrator. President Roosevelt recently requested that such a committee be named.

Other members of the committee will be John Dickinson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce; Dr. Isador Lubin, commissioner of labor statistics; John W. Upp, NRA division administrator, and the Rev. Francis J. Haas, of the NRA advisory board.

Gen. Fries retired as chief of the chemical warfare service in 1929. Since then he has been prominent in Washington civic affairs.

Labor Policy in Doubt.

While NRA was getting under way in its study of business and labor conditions, it still was marking time in reaching a policy concerning its attitude toward voluntary labor and trade practice agreements. Representatives of business who have been making inquiries concerning these agreements have been given little encouragement to expect immediate action.

NRA officials and members of the Federal Trade Commission planned to meet again today to consider their attitude toward these agreements. The commission has been handling trade-practice agreements and it was reported that it may take over this responsibility entirely, leaving NRA only agreements affecting wages and hours. It is certain, in any event, that for the first time since the NRA was organized, the two groups would work together, possibly virtually merging their activities.

100 Proposals Received.

Nearly 100 proposed agreements or messages indicating that such agreements were in the making have been received by NRA from various industries. Considerable pressure is being brought to bear, especially from members of old code authorities who do not wish to dissolve their organizations, to obtain a ruling on the agreements. Whether they are finally handled by the NRA or the Federal Trade Commission, or both, these agreements will be carefully scrutinized to determine whether they come within the antitrust laws before they are approved.

Virginia Shippers Fight Rate Change

Discrimination Feared in Hauling Proposal.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., June 24.—Proposals to repeal the long and short haul clauses of the fourth section of the Federal interstate commerce act are being opposed by Virginia shippers, it was revealed today by H. E. Ketner, commerce counsel of the State corporation commission.

Citing a written protest filed against plans to charge carriers a 25-cent lower rate from Baltimore to Chicago via Norfolk than is charged from Norfolk to Chicago, Ketner said "these amendments would mean discrimination against Virginia shipping points" such as Richmond and Norfolk in competition with Baltimore and Philadelphia in trade with the South and Middle West.

Maintenance of a lower freight rate from point A, via point B, to point C, than is charged from point B to point C on the same route is now forbidden by section 4, it was pointed out.

Masonry Starts on Postoffice.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., June 24.—Brick work on the new Waynesboro postoffice will be started tomorrow morning, Wayne Edwards, construction engineer for the Cupples Co., contractors, has announced. "Men, being men, can not tell you very much about women. For instance, to the young-man-in-love the opposite sex is all sweetness and light; the bachelor, who has dodged the ladies for years, believes them to be scheming minxes, and the married man is probably afraid to tell you what he really thinks.

Therefore, to get a true opinion of women, you must go to a woman for your information . . . and so we've gone to Miss Malvina Lindsay, editor of The Washington Post's woman's pages, to find out about those lovely and sometimes sweet creatures who do so much to make our lives happy and miserable. And Miss Lindsay certainly tells us, and all other readers of The Post, about "The Gentle Sex." You'll find her impressions of her sisters . . . and brothers, too . . . in The Post each Sunday morning to entertain . . . and educate you. Each week she writes this amusing, intelligent column which so satirically punctures so many of our illusions, and which gives us an insight into the devious ways of women.

For example, she outlines the character of Tactful Tillie, who never comes right out and tells her friends they are getting fat. Oh, no! Tactful Tillie merely sniffs, "Are'nt you getting a bit stout, dearie?" Tactful Tillie, Miss Lindsay also reveals, prides herself on being able to find out disagreeable things by a method which is practically painless . . . to her.

Or Miss Lindsay describes the conversation at the Sunday dinner table; and her description is as true to life as the family laundry line. You can recognize Uncle Henry, who wants to talk politics, and Aunt Susan, who simply must tell Cousin Mary about those perfectly darling little needlepoint footstools she saw downtown for only $2.98, or, if you read carefully, you might recognize yourself!

We are sure that Miss Lindsay's sardonic humor will please you as much as it pleases us . . . we think it's one of the best features in The Sunday Post. Gently, oh, so very gently, the barb of her wit penetrates . . . but you're laughing so much you don't mind the sting.

"The Gentle Sex," which has become one of the best-liked columns in The Sunday Post, may be found each Sunday morning on the woman's pages of The Play.

North led the Jack of diamonds, which Langdon trumped, and then a small spade was led to the Queen in the dummy. South won this trick and played another diamond. West ruffed and, realizing that after drawing trumps he would have trouble in getting back into his hand for a heart finesse, played a small heart immediately, finessing the eight in dummy, which held. Now the eight of spades was finessed and the last trump drawn, and another heart finesse enabled Langdon to set up the fourth heart in the dummy, on which a losing club was discarded.

intervened in Rome as mediators for peace."

Perrigault asked the emperor whether reports published abroad that the Turkish Moslem general, Mohammed Menine, would take command of the Abyssinian defense forces in the event of war, were correct.

Denies Menine Command.

"Gen. Menine is in Addis Ababa at present, but will exercise no command," the emperor replied. "But I beg France lend support to our plea for intervention by the League of Nations to obtain a neutral inquiry along our frontiers bordering Italian Somaliland and Eritrea (Italian colony) to determine whether we, as Italy pretends, are preparing for aggression.

"I offer this proposition as still another proof of Ethiopia's desire for peace."

Perrigault reported that mobilization of the entire imperial army at Addis Ababa has left the Abyssinian frontiers practically wide open, guarded only by small detachments of militia.

His dispatch added that hundreds of adventurers, including soldiers and fliers, have come to Addis Ababa to get the emperor's approval of plans for development of Abyssinia's army and air force, but that Haile Selassie so far has turned a deaf ear to all such foreign adventurers.

Rome, June 24.—Premier Benito Mussolini held an almost perfunctory conference with Anthony Eden, British statesman, today and continued with preparations for a swift, decisive campaign in East Africa.

Il Duce is intent upon achieving complete sovereignty over Abyssinia, regardless of the attitude of Great Britain, it was learned.

He was represented as feeling that Britain has gone outside the League of Nations to compete an understanding with Germany, approving Adolf Hitler's naval power aspirations—and hence he intends to go ahead with his program in Africa on a similar "lone action" basis.

Although preoccupied with these immediate plans, Mussolini spent two hours and a half with Eden, presumably discussing the African and other problems.

Issues Discussed.

The men met at Mussolini's offices in Venice Palace, where through the veil of official silence it was briefly revealed the statesmen engaged in general conversation on such vital issues as:

1. The Anglo-German naval understanding.

2. Projects for an aerial aid pact among Western European powers, including Germany.

3. "Other questions," which were part of the Anglo-French statement in London last February—the start of the subsequent series of international informal parleys on armaments.

The terse official communique merely said:

"M. Mussolini and Capt. Eden conversed for two hours in Venice Palace. They discussed the Anglo-German pact, projects for the aerial accord, and other questions which formed a part of the Anglo-French statement in London of February 3."

There was no official mention of the Italian-Abyssinian dispute—generally believed well in the forefront of these parleys. However, advices from London said the British foreign office Abyssian expert, Geoffrey Thompson, was being instructed to join Eden in Rome.

Confer Alone.

Eden and Il Duce, with other members of both sides, had luncheon at the Excelsior Hotel. Eden and Mussolini conferred alone in Eden's hotel suite for 30 minutes.

The conversations were described officially as "explanatory," but terminated abruptly shortly after luncheon with the announcement there would be no further discussions today. Eden is to meet with Il Duce again tomorrow morning at the Venice Palace.

Experts tonight studied details of the problems under consideration and prepared information for the chiefs of each delegation, but neither side divulged the progress, if any, which had been made in the initial brief discussions.

Eden plans to hold a general press interview late tomorrow and return to Paris for another meeting with Premier Pierre Laval prior to returning home to report on his excursion.

London (Tuesday), June 25 (AP).—A Daily Express dispatch from Addis Ababa said today the Italian Legation had ordered all Italian subjects to leave Ethiopia within 10 days.

The legation also was reported to have handed the government a note virtually accusing Ethiopia of "absorbing" the Sultanate of Jimma, which affects Italian interests.

Grace Roper Will Be Wed To Dr. Bohn

Announcement Comes as Surprise; Couple to Tour in Europe.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

When it was announced a fortnight ago that Miss Grace Roper, daughter of the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. But now the news is out, for the Secretary and Mrs. Roper have announced the engagement of their daughter to Dr. Frank Bohn, of New York City. The marriage will take place Monday afternoon, July 1, at the home of Miss Roper's parents, with only members of the family and a few friends present.

Miss Roper is a graduate of Vassar College, and last year received a master's degree in economics and international relations from the American University. One of the most popular members of the Cabinet group, she was a leading spirit in organizing and conducting the Town Hall of Washington.

Dr. Bohn is a lecturer and writer of national and international reputation. He participated in an advisory way in organizing and conducting the Town Hall, and gave a stirring and effective lecture last season on "The American Reply to Communism and Fascism." He is also an author of distinction, his last book being "The Great Change," produced cooperatively with Dr. Richard T. Ely, the eminent economist.

Immediately after the marriage ceremony next Monday, Dr. Bohn and his bride will go to New York, and will sail the following Wednesday for a three months' European trip, spending much time in Germany and Austria.

They will reside in New York, much to the regret of Miss Roper's Washington friends, but perhaps, like her sister, Mrs. David Cocker, she will be a frequent visitor in the Capital next winter.

Feathery Wool Solves Problem Of Bed Covers

Pastel Shades Decoration Aid; Lighter Works in High Wind.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

WHAT the well-dressed bed will wear this summer is a problem that has been answered neatly by the introduction of new feather-light wool blankets in cool pastel colors.

These blankets are very attractive in appearance, weigh less than two pounds each, and are soft and deeply napped. They not only provide excellent opportunity for colorful and individualized bedroom treatments, but are practical and economical as well.

Wool blankets assure evenness of body temperature whether the thermometer goes up or down, and as a consequence, ward away threatening summer colds on nights that turn unexpectedly chilly.

The summer weight wool blankets are most satisfactory bed covering to take along on vacation outings. "Roughing it" is fine, but it takes all the excess energy you have. As a result you need protected rest at night to be ready next morning for another strenuous day. Just tuck those heavy winter blankets away for their own well-earned vacation. Use your summer blankets now and don't be hauling out the winter ones for temporary use. This is hard on the blankets and housewife too.

These new summery blankets are pre-shrunk, and guaranteed to launder well. They come in rose, blue, green, peach, rose-pink, orchid and white satin borders to match. You may buy them in both single and double widths.

Novelty Lamps.

Ideal little lamps for some dark corner of your summer cottage are displayed now in the notions department of a downtown store. These, for the most part, are modernistic in design. They range in price from $1 to $1.50.

The majority of women loathe to carry umbrellas. They're nusiances, say some. They're unsightly, say others. This almost unanimous feeling against the useful, though prosaic rain paraphernalia is bound to change now that the new type of umbrella is in the center of the fashion spotlight.

These are made of an oil silk, thin, transparent fabric that looks sheer and fragile, but is actually very sturdy.

You'll love carrying such umbrellas because they're smart to look at, no trouble at all, and quite the nth degree in rain and sun protection. They come in green, red, brown, blue, orchid and white.

Once upon a time there used to be one style of beach halter. If it didn't fit, or wasn't becoming, you were out of luck. Now there are dozens of different types. See those displayed in a local store.

These are made of waffle weave pique, cut with roll ties, or high necks, plain, or buttoning down back. They come in light blue with navy bindings, yellow with brown binding, white with red, and also white with blue. All of them are touched off with nautical designs in front. Do see them!

New Idea for Sun Tanners.

A certain ingenious young woman has delighted sun tanners this season with a brand-new idea. She had worked for a long time on a sun oil for preventing burning and promoting tanning. This season she perfected it, but she suddenly realized how many such oils there were on the market, and what small chance there was for her to sell hers in competition with large nationally known houses. So she made up a little kit containing a large bottle of oil, and a small bottle with a shaker top. This little bottle you can easily tuck away in your bathing bag, or even your purse. It holds sufficient quantity of oil for at least a week-end in the sun. When that amount is used up, you can refill it yourself from the larger bottle.

Imagine what you pay for this dandy little beach item! Only 75 cents!

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Man Is Puzzled by Girl Who He Thought Loved Him Deeply; Who Refuses to Marry Him, but Encourages His Courtship.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Three years ago (I am now 30) I met a girl at a party. I took her home, not because I was attracted by her, but because it seemed the thing to do. On acquaintance, she seemed a very nice girl, and older than her actual age of 17.

• • • •

Well, we started going together, seeing each other once a week and writing in the intervals. I didn't care for her so much at first, and tried to break off several times. But she wouldn't hear of it. She lived some distance away and I was making only a small salary and had no car, so I couldn't take her places. Still, she seemed content to have me visit her at home and her family seemed to like me.

• • • •

Then her older sister started going with my brother, older than I. He has a good job and I think they plan to marry. Recently I got a better job, bought a car and was able to take my girl out more. Then her affections began to cool. I couldn't understand it. She told me she liked me a lot but not enough to marry me. I had thought she was deeply in love with me from the first.

• • • •

I have seen her a few times since, but it's the same old story. She is willing to have me take her out occasionally and telephone her, but I had supposed if you were through with a person, you wouldn't want to see him at all. What makes it hard for me is that her sister visits our home frequently and if she marries my brother (which I think she will) it will be impossible for me to keep out of the girl's way and forget all about her.

• • • •

I would like to know what you think of this girl. She has no other boy friends, I'm sure of that, but I think she's through with me. She said she might learn to love me again when it's too late. What does she mean by that? I don't understand it myself.

ANONYMOUS.

Clean Break Advised.

DEAR ANONYMOUS: What do I think of this girl? I think that without knowing her own mind (quite a natural state of being for a 17-year-old girl) and possibly challenged by your original genuine indifference to her attractions, she engaged in a more or less serious flirtation with you from the first meeting. It's quite possible she thought herself in love with you at first. It's an ancient truism that every girl is in love with love until she finds the man she can really fall in love with. Until that happens, she busies herself with draping her romantic imaginings on the first handy object, which may have been yourself in this girl's case.

• • • •

By your declaration of serious intentions, you forced her to clarify her fundamental feeling for you, which, according to her, is insufficient to justify marriage. That she is still willing to have you call upon her occasionally may mean that she is selfishly fond of you as a friend, or merely that she is trying to keep you on leash as an occasional social escort, since, as you say, "she has no other boy friends." However, since you love her and she doesn't love you, she is being rather coquettishly unfair and unkind to encourage any further meetings, in my opinion.

• • • •

What does she mean by saying she might learn to love you again when it's too late? I suppose she's trying to say that even now she doesn't know her own mind with any finality; that what she feels today isn't any augury of what she may feel tomorrow. But that's a form of coquetry, too. I should say she was trying to hold you without making any definite promises, possibly on the theory that a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush.

• • • •

My advice to you is to have done with such dalliance. Make a clean break with her, regardless of any plausible arguments she may advance in favor of a continued companionship. The only cure for heartbreak is the development of a brand-new heart interest elsewhere. To fall in love with some one else, or, at the last, to develop a congenial companionship with some other woman, would be your best safeguard against her attractions in case she eventually becomes your brother's sister-in-law, with casual entree into the family group. The only other escape is to find a job in another city.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Here's Recipe Sure to Please Ice Cream Fan

Chocolate Delicacy Will Taste Good on Languid Summer Days.

By Dorothea Duncan.

IF YOUR IDEA of fun on a lazy summer day is playing around with an ice cream freezer and your favorite ice cream is chocolate, try this recipe and you will never wish to use another.

Chocolate Ice Cream.

2 squares unsweetened chocolate, cut in pieces
3 tablespoons quick cooking tapioca
2 cups milk
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
1 cup cream, whipped
½ cup sugar
4 tablespoons light corn sirup
2 egg whites
2 teaspoons vanilla

Add chocolate and tapioca to milk in top of double boiler. Place over rapidly boiling water, bring to scalding point (allow 3 to 5 minutes), and cook 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Beat with rotary egg beater until blended. Strain hot mixture on ½ cup sugar, salt and corn sirup, stirring (not rubbing) through very fine sieve. Stir until sugar is dissolved. Chill. Add two tablespoons sugar to egg whites, beat until stiff; fold into cold tapioca. Fold in cream and vanilla. Turn into freezing container, cover tightly and pack in equal parts ice and salt 2 or 3 hours. Makes 1 quart ice cream.

May Be Frozen in Trays.

The mixture may also be frozen in the trays of a mechanical refrigerator. Freeze rapidly 3 to 4 hours.

Q.—I am having a buffet supper for eight and expect to serve cocktails beforehand. It is too hot to make elaborate appetizers. What would you suggest that I serve with the cocktails? I would like something that is simple.

A.—Crisp round crackers spread with anchovy paste and garnished with the sieved whites of hard-cooked eggs and a ring of stuffed olive are quickly made and are always tempting. They may be served from a large tray decorated with one or two paper lace doilies. A few radish roses placed here and there on the tray will add a note of color.

Stuffed celery is another favorite summer hors d'ouver. Select pieces of celery of uniform length. Wash thoroughly, wrap in a damp towel, and crisp in the refrigerator. Stuff with a mixture of two-thirds cream cheese and one-third Roquefort cheese flavored with a few drops of onion juice.

Cake Batter May Be Stored.

Q.—Can a successful cake be made if the batter is mixed ahead of time and stored in the refrigerator?

A.—Double-action baking powder is especially popular for just this reason. The batter may be mixed ahead of time and stored in the refrigerator up to a period of several days. The texture of the cake will be excellent in every respect.

The most successful way to store the cake batter is to pour it into the baking pan, cover tightly first with a damp cloth, then with waxed paper, tie securely with a cord and store in a cold place until ready to bake.

Sour Cream Cheese.

Q.—What is the simplest way of making cheese from sour cream?

A.—Let the cream sour until a good curd is formed. Tie the cream in a bag made of clean cheese cloth. Let the cream hang overnight or until all the whey has dripped through. Remove the curd from the bag, season to taste with salt and add chopped pimiento, green pepper or chives. Chill and serve as you would cottage cheese or use as a sandwich spread between thin slices of whole wheat bread.

Q.—When fresh pineapple is added to gelatin and the mixture won't jell, is it the fault of the gelatin or the pineapple?

A.—Fresh pineapple contains an unusual enzyme which prohibits gelatin from becoming hard. If the pineapple is cooked before adding to the gelatin, the mixture will get stiff.

For culinary assistance, call Dorothea Duncan, National 4200, or write to her, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, in care of The Washington Post.

Paris Tastes Tomato Cocktail.

Paris, June 17 (AP).—Americans have finally brought the tomato juice cocktail to Paris. They are being served everywhere now. Mrs. Henri Van Heukelon, who is widely known in the American colony, is among hostesses who serve them at afternoon parties.

Hostel Movement Calls To Travel Hungry Youth

Harris & Ewing.

The youth hostel movement is destined to have as firm a hold upon the affections and imagination of America as it already has on 17 European countries. So predicts Mrs. Dorothy New Christian, co-director of the Nelson School for Boys in Washington and Camp Eagle Rock in Hubbarton, Vt. Camp Eagle Rock will be one of the 36 inns in the first experimental loop of youth hostels in this country.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

AT 6 O'CLOCK this morning a station wagon, an automobile and a trailer loaded with bags, bundles and boys will roll out of Washington bound for Camp Eagle Rock at Hubbarton, Vt.

Behind the wheel of the car in front will be Harvey Nelson Smith, codirector of the Nelson School for Boys. Other occupants of the automobiles will be Mrs. Dorothy New Christian, also codirector of the school, and 12 Washington boys who will spend the summer at a place that won't be just another summer camp, but a unit of the American Youth Hostel movement.

Yesterday, at the Nelson School, Mrs. Christian told of a movement that today may mean little or nothing to the average person, but is destined to have as firm a hold upon the affections and imagination of America as it already has on 17 European countries.

One of 36 Inns in Loop.

Camp Eagle Rock, she explained, will be one of the 36 inns composing the first experimental loop of hostels set up through Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont.

Sponsored by Mrs. Roosevelt and a distinguished list of advisers, the first youth hostel in this country was opened last December at East Northfield, Mass., by Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Smith, directors of the American movement under a mandate given them by the last international conference held at Godesburg, Germany, in 1933.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith were guests at the third International Conference of Youth Hostels opened by Ramsay MacDonald in London. The American Youth Hostel Association was recognized as the eighteenth association to be included in the movement.

To Take Boys Into Open.

Discussing the project as it will be carried out in this country, Mrs. Christian pointed out it is designed to take youth away from four walls and paved streets into the open where boys and girls may discover the beauties of America, climb mountains, swim in lakes, visit places of historic and national interest and make friends with other young persons of similar interests.

She explained that membership in the American Youth Hostel Association entitled a boy or girl to use any hostel in the world at a cost of not more than 25 cents a night. All that is demanded of the itinerant youth is that he have a Youth Hostel pass, and sleeping sack, which carries sheets and cover.

"The A. Y. H. A. hopes to enable youth to travel in extreme simplicity at a minimum of expense throughout the length and breadth of the land," said Mrs. Christian. "Hostelers may travel either by foot or on bicycles, using secondary roads and trails."

A Youth Hostel is a facility and not a program, according to Mrs. Christian who mentioned that "it is for all youth to enjoy" and that "it is intended these Youth Hostels will facilitate extensive travel by being established in a network eventually covering the entire country."

She is convinced these facilities will one day be as popular in America as they have been in Europe the last two decades. "Probably Americans have been so long adopting youth hostels because our young people have had too much money to spend," she said. "But now, since so many purses are depleted, boys and girls like their mothers and fathers are seeking ways and means of getting the most for every dollar. That's why the youth hostel movement will succeed.

Became Interested in 1933.

The interest of the parents of the American movement, Mr. and Mrs. Smith—or, as everyone calls them, Isobel and Monroe—in the youth hostel movement began in the summer of 1933 when they were commissioned by Columbia University to conduct a high school group on an "international friendship tour" of Europe.

What they saw in Europe led Mr. and Mrs. Smith to believe American youth could profit by taking part in the youth hostel movement. Accordingly, one year later the American Youth Hostel Association was incorporated under the laws of Connecticut as a nonprofit organization.

The movement is the result of a dream of a young German school teacher, Richard Schirrmann. Twenty years ago he visualized thousands of inns all over the world where youth might mingle with youth and arranged sleeping quarters in the attic of his school. He invited the young people of the neighboring towns to make use of his gathering place, to stop there over night, to cook their own meals and to meet the youth of his native village around the big tables in the library.

The popularity of this schoolhouse led to the establishment of the first Youth Hostel in Altena, Westfalen, Germany—an inn that was destined to be the forerunner of thousands of similar spots throughout the world, as well as the headquarters for an international movement embracing 18 countries.

What TODAY Means

"Cancer."

IF JUNE 25 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9 to 11 a. m., 2 to 4 p. m. and 7 to 9 p. m. The danger periods are from 7 to 9 a. m., from 4 to 6 p. m. and from 9 to 11 p. m.

Be careful you are not tempted to spend money foolishly on this day. It will be well to remember that many a thing called "a bargain," in time proves to be just the opposite. Price does not always establish a true value, so be on your guard. Friendly cooperation will make many things possible. Stretching the truth is likely to be a dangerous thing to do, so be literal in whatever statements you make. Attempts to gain large profits in business transactions will probably be poor judgment. Greed has never stimulated business, and has caused many a loss.

Common sense will have to be applied to social activities, especially in the selection of those to be invited to any form of friendly gathering. Married and engaged couples, and those seeking to win some one's affection, will find this a poor day for offering any unkind personal criticism.

If a woman, and June 25 is your birthday, you love to visit strange places, and see unusual sights. If you had been born a man, and could have selected your profession, you probably would have been an explorer or a soldier of fortune. You should find water-sports fascinating. With very little effort you can probably master intricate subjects. You have, possibly, a mathematical or literary turn of mind. If you possess a love for mimicry, be careful it does not cause you to give offense by using it thoughtlessly. You may find congenial work as an artist, story writer, teacher or in selling. The extent of your conjugal bliss will depend on the amount of your devotion to your spouse.

The child born on June 25 is generally, from early childhood, of a cheerful, willing disposition, blessed with a well-developed sense of humor.

If a man, and June 25 is your natal day, you have the spirit of a gypsy, and are probably never happier than when traveling. The homing instinct, however, is strong, so you should be very happy, married. You should prove a congenial companion, and have the gift of making friends. Engineering, banking, journalism, as well as educational work may offer the best opportunities to build up a very satisfactory bank account.

For Women
PAST 45

AT this critical age, women often become cranky and irritable. Everything annoys them. They complain of headaches, dizzy spells and hot flushes. Don't blame them. They are sick.

Doctors say women between 45 and 50 suffer from lack of a hormone, or gland activator, required to keep their organs in harmony. They prescribe this hormone to relieve the nervous symptoms. By an exclusive arrangement, this female hormone is imported from Europe and combined with ovarian substance in Zo-ak Tablets.

Try Zo-ak Tablets for a month. If it does not relieve the nervous symptoms described above, your money will be cheerfully refunded. Ask for the orange wrapper Zo-ak for women. For sale at Peoples Drug Stores and all good druggists. And ask the druggist for our free booklet, "For Women Who Want to Live," written by a registered physician.

So this week The Post is asking you to submit your favorite biscuit recipe. Three prizes, $3, $2 and $1, will be awarded to the persons submitting the three most interesting recipes.

All recipes should be sent to Dorothea Duncan, home economics editor of The Washington Post. Only one recipe from each contestant will be considered for a prize. All recipes should be received on or before Thursday.

Business Women Will Like This Hot Weather Ensemble

Pattern No. 887.

WHEN SUMMER descends, this ensemble will be a boon to the business woman who lives in town or does her daily commuting. The collarless jacket is simple and cool. The dress may be made either with or without its collar—and has the complete absence of fussiness which makes for easy tubbability.

This pattern is suitable for a variety of fabrics and color combinations. The coat may be of cotton or linen, the dress of a printed cotton. Washable silk would be practical and attractive, too. The pattern is accurately cut in sizes 12 to 20; 30 to 38. Size 16 (34) requires 3⅝ yards of 35-inch material, or 3⅛ yards of 39-inch, the frock with collar; 3⅛ yards of 35-inch for the collarless dress; 2½ yards of 35-inch fabric or 2⅜ yards of 39-inch for the jacket.

Nail Wounds Carry Potential Disability

Cutter Warns Against Neglecting Punctures of the Skin.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

WARNINGS against the rusty nail are sounded every now and then. If the great lessons of prevention can be learned, disastrous results will be minimized. Any type of injury that breaks the skin or the mucuos membrane, even a hangnail or a pin prick, means potential disability.

Nail puncture wounds may be minor. On the other hand they may be serious, because the tissues close tightly after the nail is withdrawn and bacteria carried into the wound remain in a most favorable position for growth. A nail puncture may be half an inch or more in depth, and organisms that do not require oxygen, such as tetanus or lockjaw, can hold high carnival in such wounds.

Wounds caused by rusty nails are no more serious than those made by clean nails, except that the rusty nail is dirty and may carry more bacteria or more viruulent types. Rust is caused by the action of the oxygen of the air upon iron and is really iron oxide, which is not particularly poisonous. Nails left in boards around farm yards and playgrounds gather bacteria from the soil and the air, and may be deadly if planted deeply in the tissues.

Hot water and soap are excellent as cleansing agents and will remove most of the surface bacteria. Moist heat is probably the next most important measure. Hot wet dressings maintained over the wound area rally the defensive white cells of the blood and, in most instances, destroy the infection.

There is great difficulty in reaching the bottom of a puncture wound with a disinfecting agent such as carbolic acid or iodine. Absorption of bacteria takes place so quickly that it is doubtful if a cauterizing substance can reach every part of the wound channel. The situation is quite different, however, when the bacteria are on the surface, in which case soap and water, followed by a clean, sterile dressing which protects the wound from further infection, is the proper procedure.

Individuals with dirty wounds made by soiled objects should always be given a dose of tetanus antitoxim sufficient to neutralize the poison of this organism should be present. We must recall that the bacteria which cause lockjaw will not grow in the presence of air and for that reason no wound should be sealed with adhesive plaster, collodion, or other similar substances. A few layers of sterile gauze will keep out dust and afford free access to the oxygen of the air. As in many diseases the "rattlesnakes" of bacteria—the streptococci—are our worst injury enemies, and nail wounds may harbor both streptococci and tetanus organisms. Prompt attention to all wounds is of the highest importance.

The Federal Diary

By Loren Hall

Batting for Morgan Baker.

FEDERAL workers who desire to obtain benefits from the American Federation of Government Employes Sick Benefit Association for illness or other physical incapacitation must report such illness as soon as it begins in order to receive benefits, Mrs. Maude M. Anderson, Internal Revenue, president of the association, announced yesterday.

Mrs. Anderson said a medical certificate stating the nature of the illness also is necessary. If an operation is necessary, the exact cause should be given, she explained. This notice is intended to facilitate the procedure of establishing claims and collecting benefits, the president added. Employes often have failed to observe this procedure in the past.

Consideration of an amendment to Section 3 of Article 6 of the by-laws will be a high light of a meeting of the association Thursday at 8 p. m. in the executive room, A. F. of L. Building.

Under the provision of the proposed amendment, the sick benefit always would date from the eighth day of the sickness or disability, allowing the disabled person $3.50 a day.

The General Accounting Office is being flooded with applications, W. W. Richardosn, personnel director, reported yesterday. Due to the fact that so many applications already are on file, there is little likelihood new applications will receive serious consideration for some time, Mr. Richardson said.

Patents Granted.

Among patents of military or commercial importance recently issued to Government employes are:

To David Friesel (C), Navy, for a typewriter attachment to prevent the paper, after leaving the platen, from flapping about.

To George C. Hale (P), Navy, for a gelatinized explosive consisting of nitroglycerin and one or more nitro derivatives. It is claimed this can be handled much more safely than ordinary nitroglycerin.

To Bernard F. Jenkins (F), Navy, for a torque measuring device for pneumatic and electric drills.

To Henry M. Jensen (C), Navy, for an aviator's navigational instrument for solving problems involving courses and distances traveled and the determination of the angle of drift.

All Government employes who have filed application for membership at Indian Spring Country Club will be given consideration for immediate acceptance, F. G. Butler, War, president of the Inter-Departmental Golf League, announced yesterday.

Diary Guest Tickets.

If F, P or C follow your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor between 4:30 and 6 p. m. today. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's theaters: (F), Loew's Fox (stage, Eva Le Gallienne, Larry Rich, and other acts; screen, "Charlie Chan in Egypt," with Warner Oland; (P), Loew's Palace (Joan Crawford and Robert Montgomery in "No More Ladies"); (C), Loew's Columbia "Public Hero No. 1," with Lionel Barrymore).

The Library of Congress baseball team got off to a good start this week by defeating the Public Health Service nine, 8 to 4.

Miss Anna Peace McSorley, Identification Division, has been visiting in New York.

Miss Ina Jacobsen, Identification Division, is on a motor trip to Nebraska.

Please don't leave us broken-hearted;

Hear my plea,
"Where's my 30 days?"

J. J. Dugan has been appointed assistant supervisor, General Ledger Section, HOLC.

Oscar R. Kreutz, chairman, review committee, HOLC, and H. E. Hoagland, member of the board, HOLC, will go to Lake Placid, N. Y., this week on official business.

Choral Auditions Postponed.

The second audition for places in the new choral group of the Community Center Civic Orchestra has been canceled due to the serious illness of Bailey F. Alart, the musical conductor. The hearings were scheduled for tonight. Future audition dates will be announced later, according to Samuel P. Ford, assistant musical conductor. Mr. Alart was taken to Sibley Hospital last week, suffering from acute appendicitis.

Regents See Dr. Pearson About Strife

Board Then Adjourns, Failing to Take Stand on His Regime.

Head of U. of M. Spends 2 Hours Discussing Faculty Discord.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 24.—The administration of Dr. Raymond A. Pearson, president of the University of Maryland, tonight was neither vindicated nor approved as the university's board of regents adjourned a meeting previously reported as the final session of its investigation.

Six members of the board, present at the second all-day meeting within a week to consider complaints lodged against the president by students and faculty members, left the university's Baltimore offices tonight maintaining a deep silence.

Dr. Pearson was present throughout the day, but was not officially called before the regents until mid-afternoon. He was closeted with the group for two and one-half hours, presenting his side of the controversy which has arisen over charges his policies have "lowered the academic standing" and affected the morale of the university.

George M. Shriver, chairman of the board, asked whether the board planned further meetings, said only, "We have adjourned sine die."

Dr. Pearson, who remained in consultation with members of the board after adjournment, seemed cheerful, but said he had not been informed what, if any, action had been taken.

As the board convened, members of the regents group were represented as feeling a definite stand would have to be taken on Dr. Pearson's position as early as possible.

Today's meeting was the first Dr. Pearson attended since the board began its series of executive sessions about a month ago.

H. C. Byrd, vice president of the university, was in conference with the regents a few minutes early in the day and then left.

2 Postal Officials Slated to Retire

J. E. Kinney and Roy Carter to Be Pensioned.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., June 24.—Two veteran postal employes, J. E. Kinney, superintendent of mails at the Charlottesville office, and Roy H. Carter, superintendent of the university branch for many years, will be retired soon. Formal approval of their retirement, however, awaits an official order from the Postoffice Department at Washington, according to Postmaster John S. White.

It is understood that Capt. Elmer Johnson, World War veteran, will succeed Kinney as superintendent of mails, and that Carter will be succeeded at the university branch by E. V. Stratton, of the downtown office. Kinney and Carter will be retired on a pension, effective June 30.

Kinney, a native of Staunton, entered the postal service 45 years ago during the first term of President Grover Cleveland. He came to Charlottesville in August, 1926, and has served as superintendent of mails here since that date. Carter has served the Postoffice Department for 47 years. He is a native of Charlottesville.

Woman Is Held As Gun Slayer Of Her Spouse

Love Triangle Revealed at Inquest in Maryland Shooting Case.

A rural love triangle capped with tragedy came to light yesterday when a Charles County, Md., magistrate conducted an inquest into the death of Preston Penny, Indianhead liquor-store proprietor.

After hearing the evidence, a coroner's jury held Mrs. Gertrude Penny, wife of the dead man, for the grand jury on charges of firing the shotgun charge which killed her husband.

Penny was brought to Providence Hospital here June 14. He was suffering from gunshot wounds in the chest. He died yesterday. Sheriff Rusell T. Howard took Mrs. Penny before Magistrate Walter H. Gray, acting as coroner.

Questioning by the sheriff and the judge brought out the story of a general gun battle before the fatal shooting. The Pennys, according to Sheriff Howard, had been separated. During this interval, Penny had been going with a woman in the neighborhood, Howard said. Later the Pennys were reunited.

On the night of the shooting husband and wife were in the store. The other woman came in. Mrs. Penny, according to the sheriff, got a revolver from the back of the store and fired at her rival, but missed. Penny grabbed at the gun and tried to wrest it away from his wife, it was said. It was discharged again and the bullet plowed into the ceiling.

Meanwhile, the other woman had run out of the store. An unidentified man allegedly tried to force her into an automobile in front of the store. Penny ran upstairs to the living quarters and obtained a rifle and fired several times at the other man, according to the testimony. Each time he missed.

Mrs. Penny, who had found a shotgun, threatened Penny with this, Sheriff Howard said, and he retreated upstairs. She started up the stairway after him, it was declared. Penny threatened to shoot her if she came any farther. She raised the shotgun, the sheriff said, and fired. Penny fell, his chest riddled, and last night Mrs. Penny was held without bail in the Charles County Jail.

State Defends Elkton Ouster In Court Today

Roads Board Will File Answer to Protest of Commissioners.

By the Associated Press.

Elkton, Md., June 24.—The second phase of the fight between Cecil County and the State Roads Commission over the discharge of a county roads engineer takes place here tomorrow with the filing of an answer in circuit court by the roads department's attorney.

John C. Gray, special assistant attorney general assigned to the State roads commission, will file the answer with Walter E. Buck, clerk of the court.

Cecil County commissioners filed an order of complaint a week ago when Joseph T. Richards, the engineer, was notified by Ralph Townsend, district engineer, of Chestertown, of his dismissal.

The complaint cited a Maryland law which provides that road workers recommended by county commissioners shall be the first choice of the commission in filling jobs in the counties.

The board of commissioners has retained James F. Evans, of Elkton, and former State Senator J. H. C. Legg, of Centerville, to represent it.

Roads department officials asserted recently they found the department "loaded up with political appointees" when they took it over from the recent Democratic administration, and planned dismissing needless employes. A shake-up followed in Washington County, with the same action planned for all counties.

The Cecil officials declared Richards is one of the most efficient road engineers in the State. They charge politics—even to the extent of an order by the present administration to end their road maintenance until this case is disposed of.

Skyline Drive Job Can Be Continued

United States Attorney General Holds Suit Is No Bar.

By the Associated Press.

Attorney General Cummings ruled yesterday that construction of Skyline Drive could be continued despite the suit in Virginia, challenging constitutionality of the State law under which the park lands were condemned.

Fear had been expressed the action would hold up work on the drive and the Attorney General's ruling was sought by Representatives Weaver (Democrat), North Carolina, and Burch and Robertson (Democrats), Virginia.

The land involved in the litigation is not actually on the highway route, but part of the land sought in Virginia for the Shenandoah National Park.

State-Wide Jousting Tourney To Be Held at Towson, Md.

By the Associated Press.

Towson, Md., June 24.—Any Marylander who can sit safely astride a horse and handle a lance will be eligible to take part in a State-wide championship jousting match here early in August.

This ancient custom of chivalric days is to be revived on a State-wide basis, under charge of a committee of St. Stephen's Church, at Bradshaw, in Baltimore County.

There are to be two classes in the contest—one a free-for-all, the other open only to amateurs. The winning amateur will have the honor of crowning the queen of love and beauty, who may be his special fair and charming spectator. He also will have his name inscribed on a cup and be given a replica of the cup.

The trophy must be won three times—it is planned to make the games an annual affair—for permanent possession.

Entries are being received by the Rev. T. Vincent Fitzgerald, pastor of the church, for the committee, which includes Paul A. Fleury, Bradley Sheppherd, Francis Strett and Henry J. Rathel.

Girl's Slayer Admits Prior Park Holdup

Fredericksburg Couple Robbed 4 Days Before Kurz Attack.

Confessed Killer Says He Was Assisted by Man in Prison.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., June 24.—Earl Connor Williams, confessed slayer of Miss Fannie Kurz in Battlefield Park last May, has admitted, police assert, that four nights previous to the Kurz attack he held up Gilbert Sullivan, 20-year-old Fredericksburg youth, and a girl on the park road.

Williams, it was said, told investigators that he obtained a small sum from Sullivan after making the girl and sullivan leave their car and walk for a hundred yards in the darkness.

In the Kurz attack Williams, who is colored, has said that he was aided by Clifton "Lightning" Wright, 29, also colored, now serving life in the penitentiary for highway robbery and assault. Williams, interrogators say, said that Wright dealt some of the blows that caused the girl's death.

It was Sullivan's description of the man that approached his car four nights previous to the Kurz attack that was used in Department of Justice bulletins that aided in the arrest of Williams, it was said.

Sullivan said that on the night of May 16, 1934, a man approached his car and flashed a light in the window and opened the door. Sullivan said he carried a pipe about 2 feet long. After handing over their money they were permitted to return to their car.

It is believed that Williams, using the same pipe, stalked the park road four nights before he finally came upon Miss Kurz and Milton Brown high in a ravine of the park and allegedly, with Wright, beat the couple into unconsciousness and left them to die.

Williams, who first met Wright in a St. Louis carnival, was at large until C. L. Pace, a Iuka, Miss., deputy sheriff, arrested him as he prowled one of Iuka's favorite parking spots. For his capture Pace is due to receive $750, donated by the Fredericksburg City Council, Spotsylvania County and several individuals.

Liquor Conspiracy Trial Near Close

14 Witnesses Testify in Franklin County.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., June 24.—The trial of alleged Franklin County liquor conspirators approached the end of evidence after 14 witnesses had been called this afternoon, several of them to attack the character of Bud Saunders, Negro, former keeper of the keys of the courthouse at Rocky Mount, who said he had seen whole stills in the office of Charles Carter Lee, young defendant Franklin prosecutor.

Saunders also said he had known pieces of stills to vanish from the office, whose door he said he left open occasionally at Lee's order.

This afternoon T. W. Carper, the county clerk, declared that he had "heard the expression, 'as big a liar as Bud Saunders.'" Asemblyman S. M. Chitwood, of Rocky Mount, member of the house from Franklin; Floyd and Bedford, said the Negro's reputation for truthfulness was "bad." Carper, however, admitted that part of stills were kept in the prosecutor's office.

Group Protests Moving of Statue

Virginia Presbyterians Incensed at Plan.

By the Associated Press.

Princess Anne, Md., June 24.—A plan to move a statue of the Rev. Francis Makemie, founder of Presbyterianism in America, from his grave at Grotons, Accomac County, Va., to Rehoboth Church Park, Somerset County, Md., has met strong opposition among Virginia Presbyterians.

Rehoboth Church was the first organized by the Rev. Mr. Makemie. It was founded in 4670.

Virginians, at a recent mass meeting in Temperanceville, presented a long list of arguments against the proposal to Henry S. Borneman, president of the Presbyterian Historical Society, and the Rev. Thomas Pears, jr., manager, both of Philadelphia.

Counties Net $100,000 Aid For the Aged

Maryland Communities Provide Share of Pensions.

Baltimore and State Expected to Raise Remainder.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 24.—Reports from nine counties that they had provided more than $100,000 as their share for old-age pensions were made public today by the Board of State Aid and Charities.

Samuel E. Sannahan, of Easton, chairman of the board, gave out the reports as he and other members of the board planned to visit several Eastern Shore counties tomorrow to aid them in setting up local welfare boards to administer the pensions and other welfare matters.

The amount already provided led Lee L. Dopkin, of Baltimore, chairman of the board's old-age pension division, to repeat earlier estimates that approximately $1,000,000 would be all the State and its sub-divisions would be called upon to provide for the first year of the old-age pension law's operation ending June 30, 1936. Of this amount, one-third would be provided by the City of Baltimore and the counties and two-thirds by the State.

Dopkin said the City of Baltimore had not yet indicated just how much it would set aside for pensions this year but he had every reason to expect "a liberal amount will be provided."

County Levies Listed.

Of the nine counties having already acted, Allegany has appropriated the largest amount for the pensions—$30,000. Amounts set aside by other counties in their levies were:

Cecil, $10,000; Carroll, $10,000; Kent, $3,000; Montgomery, $34,500; St. Marys, $3,333; Talbot, $5,000; Wicomico, $10,000, and Worcester, $5,000.

Charles County notified the board it expected to levy $2,000 for the purpose July 1; Queen Annes that it was considering $10,000, and Harford that it would provide what its commissioners regarded as necessary in October. Washington County's commissioners said they would meet tomorrow to take up the matter.

Three counties replied that they did not strike the annual levies until some time in the future. They were Anne Arundel, January 1; Baltimore, November 15, and Howard, July 17.

3 Counties May Not Pay.

Three counties—Calvert, Garrett and Prince Georges—already had struck their annual levies before the old-age pension measure became a law and made no provisions for it. Dopkin said that unless they could obtain pension funds from some contingency source or borrow them, they would be unable to participate in the plan the first year.

Four counties had not been heard from today. They were Caroline, Dorchester, Frederick and Somerset.

Shannahan said they expected to visit the counties of Caroline, Queen Annes and Kent tomorrow and to complete the rest of the State as early as possible.

Dopkin said he planned to go to Cumberland Wednesday to study the plan used by Allegany County for a voluntary pension to help work out a uniform system for the State in administering the compulsory pension law. He said he expected the pension plan to begin operation by August 1.

Salem College Aided In Will of F. J. Ehret

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., June 24.—Salem College is named as the principal beneficiary in the will of Flavius J. Ehret, former mayor of Salem, which has been filed in probate court here. Included in the bequests to the college is a 42-acre farm near Salem.

Physician With Outdoor Hobby Joins State's Conservation Force

Dr. McComas, Who Opens Trout Lake to Public, Goes on Staff.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 24.—A Western Maryland physician who has made a hobby of fish and game conservation for many years today reported for duty as a member of the State conservation department.

He is Dr. Henry W. McComas, of Oakland. The physician owns a 500-acre mountainous tract near Oakland on which there is a 35-acre lake stocked with trout. During the fishing season he throws his estate open to the public.

He also has game preserves on the property, frequented by deer, small game and upland birds. The doctor calls his place Koshare Lake.

There is a camp for undernourished Baltimore children on Dr. McComas' property, operated by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hansen. It is called Camp Minnetoska, named for a legendary figure among Indians.

A son of the new commissioner lives in the West, and he frequently goes there for visits. During his absence on one of the trips a gang of "roughnecks," as he described them, visited his lake and cleaned it out of fish. They used dynamite, and the doctor clenches his fists when he tells about the instance.

"I'm hoping to do some constructive work as a member of the conservation commission," Dr. McComas said. "I've been interested in the work for so long, and have studied it so closely I believe I may accomplish something."

Navy Worker's Dish Wins Him Better Job

By the Associated Press.

A plateful of chicken, smothered in the old-fashioned Virginia way, has brought promotion to Robert Gaines.

Gaines, an odd-jobs man at Navy headquarters, heard that Secretary Swanson was not satisfied with the chicken smothered at the Navy cafeteria, that he considered it a little stringy.

So Gaines, a cook years ago in Virginia, decided to try his hand at pleasing the Secretary. He smothered a plateful of chicken and now has been ordered to prepare all of the Secretary's luncheons.

Investigation By Policeman Solves Death

Virginia Youth Killed by Auto in 1933; Negro Arrested.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., June 24.—Unrelenting investigation by a Richmond policeman resulted today in the arrest of William Norman Brown, Negro relief worker, and his confession, police said, that he drove the automobile that killed Elmer Dame, jr., 6, on August 12, 1933, on the Mechanicsville turnpike.

Charles Nunnally, desk officer at the first police station, received the commendation of his chief and fellow officers for providing the tip that enabled a lieutenant and a detective-sergeant to make the arrest. Nunnally had followed every clue offered to the case during the nearly two years that it puzzled all investigators.

Brown is scheduled to undergo a preliminary hearing Friday before Justice A. Taylor Pitt.

Police announced a charge of involuntary manslaughter would be lodged against Brown.

The Dame child was killed when struck by a car speeding toward Richmond as he rode his tricycle on the turnpike. Brown was said to have told police today that after the car he was driving struck the boy, he and Walter Holmes, a Negro in the machine with him, picked the child up to rush him to a hospital, but when the child died in the car they became frightened and hid the body in a gravel pit, where it was later found. Holmes has since died, Brown said.

Letters Bring Death Threats To Truckman

Postal Authorities Probe Missives Sent to Him From Salisbury.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Salisbury, Md., June 24.—For three days mail has brought to Willard Pusey, of suburban Fruitland, the warning that he will not live beyond Thursday, that his home will be burned and his motor trucks wrecked if he attempts to ride in them.

The letters, bearing Salisbury postmarks, have been turned over to postal authorities here, although the last letter warned the author would shoot any officer placed on his trail. Each letter was signed "An enemy who wants to be your friend." The first threatening note was received by Pusey last Thursday.

Neither of the letters contained a demand, but repeated the death warning several times. Written in pencil, and at times phrased incoherently, the text of the third letter made one reference to a "gang" doing the job but elsewhere employed a personal pronoun.

Pusey, 30, occupies a home with his mother, sister and brother-in-law. He is engaged in motor truck operations and the lumber business. He has not asked local authorities for protection, he said.

Hagerstown Bookmaker Ban Upheld

Attorneys for Miggins Had Held County Was Exempt From Law.

Injunction Is Refused by Judge Sloan in Decision.

By the Associated Press.

Hagerstown, Md., June 24.—Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan, in Circuit Court today, handed down an opinion upholding the law probihiting bookmaking in Washington County.

The judge ruled in the case following argument in the petition of Harry D. Miggins, of Hagerstown, for an injunction to enjoin the State's attorney and sheriff of the county from interfering with bookmaking operations.

"It must be apparent to any casual reader of this act that the legislative intention was to make the whole of the subtitle of 'gaming' enforceable in Washington County and the bill therefore is dismissed," the opinion stated.

Attorneys for Miggins had contended that the 1935 legislature erred in the effort when it repealed and reenacted section 251 of the State gambling law which had previously been declared unconstitutional by the Court of Appeals. The section exempted Washington County from the bookmaking prohibition.

State's Attorney Martin L. Ingram contended the Court of Appeals had upheld the section which exempted Washington County from the State law. He argued that if the section exempted the county, its repeal by the 1935 legislature automatically brings the county under the provisions of the State gambling act.

A number of suits for the payment of stock liability are pending in circuit court.

Lions' Rally at Ocean City Largest in District's History

By the Associated Press.

Ocean City, June 24.—With ideal weather and a holiday atmosphere prevailing in this Maryland resort center, Lions of the Twenty-second District today swung into the midst of the largest convention of the district's history. Twenty-two clubs were represented at the three-day event opening yesterday.

Hardly was the convention well under way before a contest for the next meeting place began. Cumberland put in a formal bid for the 1936 gathering, and representatives of the Wilmington and Baltimore clubs suggested Ocean City, although it would be against precedent to hold the meeting twice in succession at a place.

The visiting Lions were welcomed by Mayor W. T. Elliott. Charles M. Greeman, of Salisbury, spoke at a luncheon on the beauty of the Eastern Shore. Deep-sea fishing and sailing on Sinepuxent Bay were offered the visitors during the afternoon as samples of the section's attractions.

Bridge parties and cocktail parties were held by the ladies during the day. Bathing beauties, preparing for tomorrow's beauty contest, paraded the beach.

The founder of Lionism, Melvin Jones, secretary general of the Lions International, was guest of honor at the banquet tonight.

Another feature of tonight's program was the Governor's ball. The candidates in the beauty contest were introduced.

Tomorrow's big event will be the election of officers.

The National Theater Will House Auditions for Annual All-Washington Revue

Aspirants for Place in Cast Must Be Heard

Trials Begin July 1, at 8; May's Film 'Champions;' About Showshops.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

Auditions for the third annual all-Washington revue, "Going Native," a summertime fixture at Loew's Fox Theater, will be held in the National Theater on the evenings of Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, July 1, 2 and 3, according to announcement made last night by Carter Barron, Loew division manager, and Gene Ford, manager of Loew's Fox and producer of the revue.

Use of the National Theater was secured through the co-operation of Manager Stephen E. Cochran. It is the belief of those sponsoring the revue that auditions on the stage of a full-fledged, legitimate theater, with complete equipment and facilities for every manner of stage presentation, will give a much more accurate line on the real capabilities of aspirants for a place in the revue than try-outs conducted in a "flat" auditorium or hotel ballroom as has been necessitated in previous years.

Auditions will begin each evening at 8, sharp, and will continue until midnight if necessary. Producer Ford is of the opinion that the three nights will provide ample time in which to hear all applicants for places in the cast, but, if such proves not to be the case, additional auditions will be held after the Fourth of July. Further announcement will be made in due time if additional auditions are demanded.

Material Being Prepared.

Ground plans for the show already have been laid. Mr. Ford, who has been in charge of all the "Going Native" productions, has been gathering material for this year's revue for the past month. Writers already are at work on the "black-out" skits and special numbers.

Marjorie Hartoin, ballet mistress at the Capitol Theater in New York, who directed the dances for the line numbers last year, has been assigned to direct the dance routines for the forthcoming production.

Any resident of Washington, or its suburbs, is eligible for participation in the revue, with the single proviso that he or she must be 18 years of age, or over, to conform to the strict provisions of the District child labor law, a drastic instrument that should be wiped off the statute books.

To facilitate the compilation of lists of those wishing to compete in the auditions for "Going Native," printed application blanks are now available at Loew's Fox, Palace and Columbia Theaters, or may be obtained from the drama desks of the local press. That unusual interest attaches to this local talent production is made evident to this column by the large number of requests for enrollment blanks that have come to hand since the single announcement in this space that they are to be had from this department. So far, feminine aspirants for stage recognition have outnumbered the males by about 2 to 1 in the requests for application blanks reaching this department through the mail. There are still plenty of the blanks on hand and more obtainable when they are gone.

The "Champions for May."

Six productions playing key city theaters turned in box-office grosses during last month entitling them to rank as the "Box-Office Champions for May," according to the monthly tabulation of the Motion Picture Herald, foremost of the motion-picture trade journals, published in its issue of June 22.

As has been the case so frequently of late months, the top position was undisputed. Two pictures were tied for second place. Third, fourth and fifth also were uncontested.

The No. 1 position was won by the first of the films celebrating the prowess of the Department of Justice agents engaged in the precarious business of running down crime, First National's production of "G Men," starring James Cagney, with Margaret Lindsay and Robert Armstrong leading the support.

The releases tied for second honors were "Naughty Marietta," with Jeannette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, and "Goin' to Town," Mae West's hectic hybrid of a cowgirl gone rich.

Reveal Wide Mass Tastes.

Coming along in third, fourth and fifth positions were "Les Miserables," with Fredric March and Charles Laughton; "The Bride of Frankenstein," featuring Boris Karloff and Elsa Lanchester, in private life Mrs. Charles Laughton, and "Our Little Girl," starring Shirley Temple.

These six features betray a remarkable catholicity of national taste. The picture at the top of the list is a frank and thrilling melodrama. Following then, come an operetta—and one of the finest ever made—a ribald comedy-drama, sprinkled with music, including a burlesque scene from Saint-Saens' "Samson and Delilah;" the film version of a literary classic, a "shocker" and juvenile comedy-drama.

Although the first, "G Men," in the estimation of this department, is not necessarily the best of the cycle of crime pictures approached from the same point of attack. The presence of "Goin' to Town" as a companionpiece to "Naughty Marietta," it seems to me, must be construed as eloquent evidence of Mae West's hold upon public imagination rather than as an accurate estimate of the intrinsic worth of the picture. And one of May's "champions"—I am speaking of the month now and not of the undulant Miss West—has no right up there among the first six, in the fifth or any other month.

You may write your own ticket as to which one.

Too much emphasis can not be laid upon the excellence of the new-process, Technicolor short subject, "Memories and Melodies," currently being shown as the principal supplementary feature of the bill at the Earle Theater. This sentimental tribute to Stephen Collins Foster and the enduring quality of his familiar folksongs is executed with intelligence and respect and a keen eye for artistic groupings and entrancing color effects. During the unreeling of the film one hears "My Old Kentucky Home," "Ring, Ring the Banjo," "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground," "Sewanee River" and "Lay Down the Shovel and the Hoe," each accorded a setting and musical treatment that completely justify the spontaneous outburst of applause that greets each screening of this artistic gem, which, conservatively, may be said to point the way to new eminence for the short subject.

"T. M." Comes Home.

On September 1, according to week-end announcement, an organization known as Tom Moore and Associates will transfer its activities from New York to Washington.

This will mark the return of Tom Moore, one of the Capital's pioneer motion-picture distributors and exhibitors and builder, and owner of the Rialto Theater, at Ninth and G streets, to his home town and active participation in its development as an amusement center.

The various departments of effort contemplated by Tom Moore and Associates will include the production of condensed versions of many standard plays, occasional motion-picture versions of these dramalets, in both black-and-white and natural color, adaptation of those that are found suitable for such purposes to the radio and the establishment of studios and executive offices for the furtherance of the company's artistic, as well as commercial, aims.

Will Give Talent Chance.

One is led to believe that it will be the purpose of Tom Moore and Associates to utilize the services of local talent as well as imported stars, stage and screen directors, dramatists and scenario writers.

In the broad field of amateur theatrical activity in the National Capital, Mr. Moore perceives a fine source of stellar material which he proposes to develop and afford a shot at the "big time" which usually is exceedingly difficult to obtain.

Further announcement of plans, personnel and office and studio sites will be made in the near future.

Preacher Handles 7 Deadly Snakes

Woman Only Person Bitten at Kentucky Rally.

By the Associated Press.

St. Charles, Va., June 24.—Seven reptiles at a time—it's all the same to the Rev. George Hensley, the snake-handling preacher of this mountain area.

His hand still bandaged from a copperhead bite here four weeks ago, the preacher didn't quake at numbers when four rattlers, two copperheads and a water moccasin were brought to him yesterday at a demonstration at Black Mountain, Ky., near the Virginia line. Nearly 3,000 people saw him handle the snakes without a single fang being dug into his flesh.

But one of the rattlers acted a bit ugly. It nipped Mrs. Maggie Day, of Pine Mountain, Ky., on the end of one of her fingers as a member of the congregation passed by her with the reptile in hand.

Only a slight wound resulted and no swelling was evident.

His companion, James Case, of Cedar Grove, escaped with minor injuries. Coffman's car was wrecked.

Claude McDonald, of Romney, driver of the truck, was not seriously injured, but James Davis, of Romney, his companion, was taken to the hospital for treatment of lacerations. No charges have been placed pending outcome of Coffman's injuries.

Two Virginia Cities Due for Bootleg Probe

Richmond, Va., June 24 (AP).—At least two Virginia cities are due for a detailed probe of modern bootlegging activities, it was indicated here today. Norfolk and Richmond, it was said, will be included in the Federal check-up, for which the Treasury Department at Washington has asked $1,086,941 in work relief funds.

The investigation presumably would include a survey to determine whether any dealers supplying the ABC board with liquor are dodging Federal levies.

FERA Will Continue Education in Loudoun

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., June 24. — Adult education under FERA in Loudoun County will continue through the summer months, according to Thomas Taylor, director. The work, which was begun in October, 1934, has paid out $1,591.90 in salaries to teachers.

Thirteen teachers have been employed for varying lengths of time, with work ranging from the teaching of illiterates to classes in handicraft and agriculture. Approximately 200 persons have received instruction in these schools.

Strawberry Crop Aids Back Taxes

Somerset County Sales Total $450,000.

By the Associated Press.

Princess Anne, Md., June 24.—The most profitable strawberry season in many years has reflected to the credit of the Somerset County treasurer.

Carlo Bozman, the treasurer, reported today $54,000 in back taxes have been collected since he took office in April, and in the same time strawberry sales in the county totaled $450,000.

The poor prices and declining catches of oysters, fish and crabs have worked hardships on the people of this county in recent years, it was said. A number of them were forced to go on relief rolls. Meantime delinquent taxes piled up to the unprecedented total of nearly $200,000. Many tax sales were said to have been halted by the returns from a bumper crop of berries.

Man Killed by Truck; Boy Held as Driver

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Ray Showen, 34, of Nutter Fort, died in a hospital two hours after the accident from a fractured skull and internal injuries. Fritz Cook, 65, of Nutter Fort, is being treated in a hospital for severe head injuries and bruises and is expected to recover.

Samuel Poulice, jr., 15, driver of the truck, gave bond of $500 for a hearing Wednesday afternon on a manslaughter charge.

Cumberland Bakery to Rebuild.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., June 24.—Work has begun on the erection of a modern bakery to replace the plant of the Queen City Bread Co., which was destroyed by fire this month. John I. Vandegrift has the contract and it is estimated that the new building, with machinery, will cost approximately $50,000. Completion of the plant is expected by September.

Baptist Group to Convene.

Salisbury, Md., June 24 (AP).—Baptist Church workers from many localities of the Eastern Shore will meet here tomorrow for the Eastern District Sunday School Convention at Allen Memorial Church. Dr. John E. Ditto, of Pocomoke, will speak during the day, and Dr. Joseph T. Watts, of Baltimore, will be a speaker at a young people's banquet tonight.

Treasury in Virginia Has $585,559 Balance

Richmond, Va., June 24 (AP).—The general fund of the Virginia treasury today contained an estimated unexpended balance of $585,559, with approximately 43 per cent of it the $250,000 which the ABC board received to start operations in the spring of 1934.

Because of the rapid turnover of business in liquor retail stores it was never necessary to use this sum, it was pointed out here today.

Two Malloys Card Par 72s to Lead U. S. College Golf Qualifiers

Public Interest Intense as Primo, Louis Wind Up Training

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

Flying to the Fight, June 24.

THIS burnt child, who was severely singed while playing prophet anent the outcome of the recent Baer-Braddock affair, respectfully declines to venture even close to a personal opinion concerning tomorrow evening's proceedings at Yankee Stadium where Joe Louis meets up with Primo Carnera. This aloofness of mine doubtless will be hailed with great huzzahs by my readers, or reader, as the case may be. After all, I might have influenced the weak-minded or those of short memory. Just to refresh your mind on the subject, I'm the guy who picked Mr. Baer to stretch Mr. Braddock as horizontal as the Pennsylvania avenue car tracks in five rounds or less.

POVICH.

But I want to be there tomorrow night. I want to see Detroit's Black Bomber, Dark Dynamiter, or Sepia Socker, as he is known to the boys who, willy-nilly, insist on the alliteratives; I want to see him in the ring against a guy who outweighs him by 60 pounds. I want to see what happens when Joe Louis throws those crunching punches into Primo's ribs, and I want to be there when he crosses that right against Primo's chin. I want to see what happens then.

And I want to see if Joe Louis can take it. I want to know what will happen when that awful right uppercut that Primo can throw when he gets mad lands against the chin of the guy who hasn't been asked to take a stiff punch since turning pro. I want to see if it's possible to mould a new heavyweight champion in the 22 fights that Louis has had since he turned pro. I want to see all these things, and more.

I WANT to see for myself if Louis is deserving of that tremendous build-up that they've arranged for him, and if he is really the killer they say he is. I want to know if he really shuffles and sidesteps like a champion, if he knows how to get inside and nullify that long reach that Carnera has on any man he faces. I'm wondering if he shifts the way they say he does and can shoot those punches in close with that awful effect they say he gets.

And I want to see, too, if he is good, and he can hit Carnera, and can hurt him; I want to see if he knows how to polish a man off, something that Max Baer never learned to do. I want to know if he knows how to press his advantage and if he really has that killer instinct like no man since Dempsey. His build-up has me wondering, and I want to see all these things.

And I'd like to know what he will do if the battle goes against him, because he's never been behind in any of his fights yet. I want to know if he's the same cool, calm sharpshooter they say he is when a big left hand has been sticking in his face for a few rounds, if Carnera does stick that big left in his face. I want to know how he'll react when Primo pushes and mauls and shoves and holds and hits and steps on his toes. Will he keep his head?

I'm wondering how he'll come out to meet Carnera in that first round, whether he'll meet him in midring on his toes, or meet Primo coming off his own stool. Or whether he'll sidle around the ring, waiting for Primo to come to him and waiting for an opening. Dempsey never did. I want to see if, indeed, Louis is of the same mold.

AND I want to see Carnera, too. I want to see him really get mad in the prize ring. I want to see if there is really any brute in him, and if he has learned to make use of that awful strength he possesses. I want to see if he knows enough to keep Louis from coming inside where they say he does the most damage, or whether he'll play the fool and let Louis come to him.

I want to see Primo go berserk and lash away instead of pushing his punches. I want to see what will happen if he does. Oh, I want to be there. I want to see if Primo can forget to box and turn fighter if he has Louis in distress. And if he can take it in the body where they say he'll get it. And if he'll play the fool and drop his hands down to protect himself and leave his chin open.

I want to see all these things. I want to be there at the ringside when that opening gong rings. If it's going to be a spectacle of man's inhumanity to man, I'm of the ilk who wants to be there—among the noncombatants.

The winner? You're asking me?

Louis Winner, Says Gallico, But Then on the Other Hand—

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, June 24.—After having selected Ross to knock out McLarnin and Baer to knock out Braddock I must say that I am approaching my morning-of-the-big-fight column a little tenderly. I no longer am particularly interested in forecasting the eventual winner and the manner of winning. I should feel satisfied if I were able to tell you that it was going to be a big fight. The worshippers of professional brutality have spent a good deal of money in the month of June and I wouldn't say that they had seen a good fight yet. Both the Ross-McLarnin and the Baer-Braddock's fights were utterly devoid of carnage even though they were interesting pugilistic studies.

This sort of thing is all right at the "Y" smoker exhibition with 16-ounce gloves or at an illustrated lecture on the manly art of self-defense, but let us not pull our own legs, my little Brussels Sprouts. When we part with $20 or $16.15 for a seat to a boxing match, we want blood. If we came just to see the freaks, the price would be 15 cents, as it was at the World's Fair, plus 10 cents for a set of picture postcards.

Good Brawl, Maybe.

On paper the match between Joe Louis and Primo Carnera looks to be like a pretty good brawl, but now I am more distrustful than ever of these paper fights. If I go by the evidence of my eyes, Louis is the most damaging hitter in many years. And Carnera is certainly big and strong enough to be a destructive force if aroused. Their pre-battle statements breath fire; each expects to knock the other out. Perhaps it might be best and fairest to examine the things which lie in the way of the execution of these thrilling designs. Carnera must overcome the pugilistic habits of a life time, and in all my 10 or 11 years of looking at fighters I have only seen one who changed from a defensive, timid, counter fighter and boxer to a knockout artist and that one was Mike McTigue. Still, if one man may prove the exception to the rule, I suppose there might be another. Personally I think we are going to see the same old shy, easily upset marshmallow punching Carnera in there tomorrow night—unless, as I wrote before, he can go berserk.

Punch Has to Land.

Joe Louis has given proof in his fights with pretty fair men, as his record shows, that he can knock you out with either hand, and I saw the effect of his hitting in his training camp work. But I remember the lesson taught me many years ago by the man who first took me around to fights, old Harry Newman, who used to be boxing writer on the New York News. It was something to the effect that a knockout punch wasn't worth much if the guy who had it couldn't find a place to lay it in.

There is to be considered also the colored man's inexperience. He is but a year out of the amateurs. He has a couple of very sweet levelers, one on the end of each arm, but every so often these sluggers run up against a boxer whom they can't hit. It is just possible that Da Preen plans to box Detroit Joe for 15 rounds, in which case you will find more excitment at the flower show.

Hedging? Nope, I still pick Louis to knock Carnera out even though this time I have that "wrong" feeling even more strongly than I had at the start of the Baer-Braddock thing. I like the way Louis slides and shuffles in close to a big man and holds his shots until they mean something. The imagination draws definite pictures and you can not escape them.

My opinion is that Louis will stiffen Carnera inside of five rounds. I'm not particularly concerned this time with being right. What I would like more than anything is for you to get something for your dough. It's so hard to make these days.

Odds 8 to 5 On Eve of Bout

Negro Heavily Favored by Western Money in New York.

By Bill McCormick.

A Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, June 24.—The greatest public interest manifested in a heavyweight prize fight since Jack Dempsey splattered Georges Carpentier has been aroused over the 15-round non-title bout between Joe Louis, the Dark David, and Primo Carnera, the Glum Goliath, at the Yankee Stadium tomorrow night.

Continued heavy advance sales give every indication that the gross gate receipts will pass the $400,000 mark, may even reach the $450,000 figure set by Promoter Mike Jacobs of the Twentieth Century Club as his goal.

The largest volume of betting in many a month already has been recorded, with Joe Louis money still pouring in from the hinterlands to be covered by the shekels of those in the East who have not seen the Brown Bomber perform. Louis was an even money bet at the outset, but it now takes 8 to get 5 that the Detroit Destroyer will punch holes in Ponderous Primo.

Training Wound Up.

Both fighters have wound up their training and are resting for the big night. Louis, the sensational Negro who is undefeated in 22 professional fights, was calm and collected as he loafed until the zero hour. To the sloe-eyed Negro, his first bid for big time fame and fortune is just another fight.

Carnera also is resting his 260-pound frame somewhere. He broke camp in inaccessible Lake Owasco today and was whisked away to an even more inaccessible location by his managers Billy Duffy and Louis Soresi. The Italian Giant will remain in seclusion, far from the madding throng, until the time for the official weighing-in ceremony tomorrow afternoon.

A defeat for Louis will not necessarily mean the end of his clouting career, but if Primo is battered to the floor it may well mean that he will be relegated to the ranks of second-raters. Louis is young, just 21, and many feel that he lacks the experience to cope with Carnera. If he is beaten by Primo, it will mean that he will be sent back to the minors for further seasoning.

Primo Has No Alibi.

If Carnera bites the dust, he will have no excuses. He has the edge on the colored lad in weight, reach, height, and experience. The only thing he may lack is natural fighting ability—of which Louis has an abundance. The Jittery Giant who held the heavyweight championship until Max Baer pushed him out from under it, is declared in fine fighting fettle by his managers and those who watched him conclude his training and, barring another "sprained ankle," will be hard-pressed for an alibi if he loses.

A force of 1,000 New York City policemen will be detailed to take care of the crowd of upward of 50,000 that is expected. Some will be stationed outside to take care of the ticket lines and others at the entrances but most of the squad will be placed at strategic points inside the arena to preserve law and order during the mixed bout.

In addition to the New York City policemen, there will be about 100 special coppers in the enclosure. Some 100 gate watchers, 200 inspectors and 300 ushers will assist in handling the throng.

Chicago and Detroit, both cities in which Louis is the reigning pugilistic favorite, will be represented by large delegations, including most of the city heads. Scores of special trains and buses are pouring in from not only Chicago and Detroit, but other midwestern points where the Brown Blaster is well known.

Experts Favor Joe Louis, 13 to 8

But Craftiest Prophets Are on Side of Carnera in Big Bout.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

NEW YORK, June 24.—As the time nears for the 15-round heavyweight bout between Joe Louis and Primo Carnera the "master minds" of the fight profession were busy making their predictions.

Louis was leading 13 to 8 in a poll taken here tonight, but many of the octette balloting for Primo were among the most expert of the experts. Such sterling prophets as Billy McCarney, who called the turn on the first Tunney-Dempsey fray and the recent Braddock-Baer upset, were among those favoring Primo.

The consensus:

Johnny Buckley (Boston manager of Jack Sharkey and other fighters)—Carnera is too big and powerful.

Joe Tippman (Baltimore manager)—Louis will win with his punch.

Billy Taub (radio flatic expert)—Nothing to it but Primo.

Sam Taub (same as Billy Taub)—I've got to string with Carnera.

Ray Carlen (manager of Frankie Klick)—Louis within five rounds.

Billy McCarney (fight manager)—Louis is too young for a veteran like Carnera.

Lou Brown (music writer)—The colored boy hits too hard for Carnera.

Harry Wills (former heavyweight contender)—Louis is great. His punch will win.

Billy Roche—Experience is the thing. Carnera has it.

Abe Attell (former fighter)—Carnera is a superior boxer. That's enough.

Sam Langford (former boxer)—My boy Joe will knock him out.

Lou Holtz (comedian)—Carnera will not take it from Louis.

Dr. Joseph Bier (trainer)—Never was a fighter like Louis. He'll win.

Harry Lenny (manager of Ray Blimpel-littiere)—Louis is marvelous. Can't miss.

Sam Pian (co-manager of Barney Ross)—You'll see the greatest fighter in Louis.

Art Winch (same as Pian)—Louis will bowl the big guy over.

Ray Arcel (Braddock handler)—I'll have to pick Louis.

Whitey Bimstein (same as Arcel)—Primo is too big for Louis.

Andy Neidderreitter (manager)—I'm still strong for the big fellow.

Whitehill Loses Duel, 9 to 8, in 14 Innings

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

DETROIT, June 24.—Detroit's Tigers tormented Earl Whitehill for 14 innings this afternoon and finally put him out of his pitching miseries in his marathon duel with Tommy Bridges.

The score was 9 to 8, decided by a harmless-looking fly ball off a pitcher's bat in the fourteenth inning when the winning Tiger run scored from third, but that is not the story of the ball game.

Back in the second inning, Washington had given Whitehill a 5 to 1 lead that he wasted in the fifth, but thereafter until the thirteenth, he was superb as he found himself locked in a sensational duel with the fragile Tommy Bridges who dealt out ten consecutive scoreless innings to the Nats.

Nats Get Three Runs.

Then in the thirteenth, Washington scored three runs. Kuhel began it with a double and was safe at third on Stone's safe sacrifice bunt. Buddy Myers' infield out scored Khuel with the apparent winning run and when Goose Goslin dropped Manush's easy fly, it set the stage for Cecil Travis' single that scored two more runs.

But Whitehill, who had turned back the Tigers at every turn from the fifth to the thirteenth, couldn't hold onto that lead.

Pinch-Hitter Owen doubled and Fox walked, but there were two out when big Hank Greenberg came to bat. It was a single into center by Greenberg that scored the Tiger's first run of the inning and then it was that Goose Goslin redeemed himself for his error earlier in the inning.

With a count of three balls and two strikes, Goslin crashed a terrific double against the right-field bleacher wall and the score was tied at 8 to 8.

Whitehill Weakens.

Elden Auker repulsed the Nats in the fourteenth and then it was that Whitehill, whose pitching heroics as the game wore into extra innings might have stamped him as the hero, weakened once more.

Ray Hayworth belted a single into right and little Clifton sent him to third with a single to center

Americans Fall In Wimbledon Title Quest

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 24.—An even half of the American contingent, including the No. 1 Davis Cup star, Wilmer Allison, failed to survive the first round of the Wimbledon men's tennis championships today.

Regarded as one of the two American singles hopes, the Texan fell before the shrewd thrusts of the young Australian, Vivian McGrath, in a four-set match, 6—4, 6—3, 7—9, 7—5.

The other four American Davis Cup players came through their first singles tests, but four "free lances" from the United States joined Allison in the trek to the sidelines.

Gene Mako ousted a countryman when he took a hard-fought encounter from David N. Jones, of New York, former Columbia star, 7—5, 6—3, 4—6, 6—4. Sidney B. Wood, of New York, downed E. Itoh, of Japan, 6—2, 6—2, 6—0; Donald Budge disposed of Frank H. D. Wilde, of England, 8—6, 6—2, 6—1, and John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, defeated Don Turnbull, of Australia, 6—2, 6—3, 8—6.

Hines Also Wins.

They were joined in the winning column by Wilmer Hines, of Columbia, S. C., who took the measure of Andre Lacroix, of Belgium, 4—6, 6—1, 3—6, 6—3, 6—4.

The other beaten Americans included William W. Robertson, of San Marino, Calif., who lost to Enrique Maier, Spanish champion, 6—2, 6—3, 6—3; Henry Culley, of California, beaten 6—3, 11—9, 6—2, by G. R. P. Hughes, of Great Britain, and Clayton Burwell, of Charlotte, N. C., who bowed to L. Shaffi, 8—6, 4—6, 8—6, 7—5.

The women's singles and the men's doubles will get underway tomorrow. Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, former Wimbledon champion, now in the midst of a comeback, plays M. Baumgarten, of Hungary, and Helen Jacobs, the American champion, meets left-handed Nelli Adamson, the Belgian champion, in what the experts think will prove easy wins for the two Americans.

'Babe' Loses Skirmish to Miss Hicks

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 24.—The first skirmish between America's first "business women" golfers—Mildred (Babe) Didrikson, famous girl athlete from Beaumont, Tex., and Miss Helen Hicks, of Siwanoy, Long Island—resulted in a triumph for Miss Hicks, former national amateur champion.

In qualifying for the championship match play flight in the women's Western Open golf championship, the ever-smiling Miss Hicks led the 32 qualifiers, celebrating her return to competitive play with a card of 42-37—79, one over par at the Sunset Ridge Country Club. Her score won medalist honors.

Four shots back of Miss Hicks, in third place among an entry list of 108, largest and fastest field any women's Western event has ever drawn, was lanky Miss Didrikson, playing her first tournament in her new role as a business woman golfer. She turned in a card of 42-41—83, to lead Mrs. Opal S. Hill, Kansas City, by a single stroke.

Sandwiched between Miss Hicks and the Texas girl was 18-year-old Ella Mae Williams, of River Forest, Ill., runner-up for this year's Illinois State championship. Miss Williams, daughter of Eddie Williams, River Forest professional, shot the difficult course in 41-41—82.

That 79 score, eight over men's par, enabled Miss Hicks to lead 31 others into the first round of match play.

Joe E. Brown Confers About Buying Braves

New York, June 24 (AP).—Joe E. Brown, film comedian, whose name has been connected with reports of a pending change in ownership of the Boston Braves, conferred today with Ford C. Frick, president of the National League, soon after his arrival from the West.

It was understood Brown planned to look into the possibility of acquiring a financial interest in the Braves. The comedian said he was "interested" on behalf of a syndicate.

Sensational 66 Is Carded by Mac Smith

Veteran Is 6 Under Par as British Qualifying Play Starts.

By the Associated Press.

MUIRFIELD, Scotland, June 24. Macdonald Smith, who by his own admission grows better with age, shot one of the greatest rounds of his long career—a 6 under par 66—to lead a field of upward 250 at the half-way point today in the 36-hole qualifying competition of the British Open Golf Championship.

The second, and final 18-hole trial round will be played tomorrow. Thereafter the competition will be limited to 100 low scores and ties for the 72-hole championship proper, which will start Wednesday over the Muirfield course, where Walter Hagen won his last major title in 1929.

Apparently finding fresh inspiration in the fact that he was paired with the rugged Alf Padgham, a Briton and second betting choice, the 45-year-old Carnoustie-born Scot who makes his headquarters in Glendale, Calif., played the long and windy Gullane course as it never was played before. There was no previous official record for the course, but local experts could not recall anybody ever having played the lengthened layout within two strokes of Smith's mark. He fashioned his performance from an outgoing 34 and an incoming 32.

Haas Is Third As Tourney Is Started

Princeton and Michigan Lads of Same Name Pace Fast Field.

Yates, Fischer Trail in Medal Test at Congressional.

By Dave Herman.

THE Malloys—Jack, of Princeton, and Woodrow, of Michigan—stole the show in the first round of the 36-hole qualifying test of the National Intercollegiate golf championship yesterday at Congressional Country Club.

They are not related, these Malloys, but by coincidence they matched scores, each shooting a 72, even par, to pace a field of 120 starters during a day which witnessed the collapse of at least six of the favorite players.

Not reckoned with in the pre-tournament calculations, these two young golfers came through with brilliant 18-hole rounds, going out in 36 and playing the back nine in 36, to come within one shot of equaling the competitive course record.

Hails From Tulsa.

Jack Malloy, a junior at college, hails from Tulsa, Okla., and has a brother, Pat, who is here with the Notre Dame team. Pat wasn't so hot. His best was an 87. Jack will be captain of the Princeton golfers next season. He is 21.

Woody Malloy, who was named Woodrow Wilson, because he was born on the same day Wilson was elected President of the United States, is a junior at Michigan, lives in Ann Arbor, and learned most of his golf from a brother, who is a professional.

The Princeton golfer was the first of the Malloys to take the lead. He finished his round just a wee bit before 1 p. m., with a spectacular eagle-deuce on the home hole, certainly the most sensational performance of any of the 120 contestants. The 140-pound, good-looking, black-haired lad boomed out a screaming drive from the eighteenth tee, and the ball finished 10 feet to the left of the pin.

Haas Finishes Third.

While an admiring gallery looked on in wide-eyed amazement, he stepped up to his putt and calmly knocked the ball into the cup to clip two strokes off par for this 300-yard hole, and level par for the 18 holes.

Alone in the runner-up position marched 19-year-old Freddie Haas, of Louisiana State University, who cracked out a 73, one over par, late in the afternoon, with a birdie 3 on the home hole. Haas needed birdies on the seventeenth and eighteenth to tie the Malloys. His putt from 30 feet on the former hole ran inches past the cup—but he was, indeed, successful with his 3-footer for a 3 on the last hole.

Seventy-fours were posted by Charlie (Chuck) Koscis, blond Michigan star, medalist in last year's tournament, who negotiated the last nine in 35, even par, after canning a 10-footer for a birdie on the final hole, and Lewis Johnson, jr., of the College of Charleston, S. C., who blasted out a great 35, two under par, on the first nine, and Erwin Laxton, of North Carolina, who scored 38-36.

Favorites in the Ruck.

But, where, you will ask, were the favorites?

Charlie Yates, of Georgia Tech, defending champion, stroking the ball well off the tee, but putting poorly, shot a 78, after taking 40 strokes on the outgoing side.

Michigan's Johnny Fischer, 1932 Intercollegiate title holder, former Walker Cup star, and the favorite in the eyes of many observers, finished with a 38-39—77. Fischer, playing with Joe Lynch, Georgetown captain, who carded a fine 75, couldn't keep his shots in the fairway, could'nt stroke the ball close enough to the hole on numerous holes, and had the misfortune to

Charles Town Mutuels Go Crazy, "Double" Paying $586.80

$25 Is Price On Winner Of Fifth

Never Idol Is Paired With Rose Marie B. in Big Pay-Off.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., June 24.—The lid blew off the mutuel machines here this afternoon. After operating in average fashion for many days, the pay-off division suddenly went haywire and many players left the park shaking their heads and agreeing that Monday was "washout day." The most important item of the day, from a monetary angle, was the daily double. The popular twin wager brought joy to the hearts and a bulge to the bank rolls of four customers. For their $2 investment each received $568.80, the largest figure displayed among the possible winning combinations.

The pair that supplied the "double" fortune was Never Idol, winner of the first race, at $24.80, and Rose Marie B., at $145.40, the best individual mutuel of the meeting, thank you. The horses ran contrasting races, but the result was the same. Never Idol appeared to be always idle as the field left the barrier, but she gained momentum as the race progressed and won going away.

Rose Marie B., recently reinstated after a suspension because her trainer was found to be stimulating (horses, not himself), ran like a scared rabbit. Jockey C. Coffman broke the ancient mare on top of the field and she did not falter. Only $25 was played on Rose Marie B.'s chances to win. They consisted of ten $2 tickets and three 3-across-the-board tickets.

But to return to the daily double, the $586.80 pay-off did not begin to compare with a parlay on the two winners, according to their mutuel prices. Of course Rose Marie B. would not have paid as much with money coming off Never Idol bet on her, but for sake of argument, a $2 parlay on the pair figures $1,862.96.

Just to show that they were in a pay-off mood, the mutuels turned out a $25.80 return on Blind Playdema in the fifth race.

The outstanding race of the day was the sixth, a test over the six and a half furlong sprint route, for the better claiming horses. The winner was Jobakheta. The gelding was the long shot in the race, as far as the track handicapper was concerned for he put the horse in the "field." However, he paid $8. Ado, the other "field" horse, finished third, with Jinnee, a long shot, sandwiched in between.

Ralph Ellis Flouts "Dope" to Beat Willis in D. C. Net Tourney

Yale Youth's Victory Is Upset

Great Height, Smashing Drives Defeat Carolinian.

By George Considine.

AS PLAY reached the fourth round in the District of Columbia tennis championships yesterday at the Columbia Country Club, Ricky Willis, seeded eighth and captain of the University of North Carolina's net team, found himself the hapless victim of the tournament's first major upset.

Caring little for pre-tournament dope, Ralph Ellis, tall and bespectacled ace from Yale, swept through the favored Willis in straight sets, 6—4, 6—2. The Ellis cannon-ball service was working to perfection as he pounded down ace after ace.

Although the critical points were decided from the barrier, Ellis was all over the court using his tremendous height to such advantage that Willis simply couldn't swing into his usual flawless repertoire. In a fourth round encounter at 5 o'clock today Ellis will match his speed against the smooth plodding game of Allen Blade.

Dooley Mitchell, second seeded netman, ran into a tartar in youthful Frank Williams, who pressed the curly-haired Georgetowner far more than the 6—4, 6—2, scores indicate. Meanwhile, Barney Welsh, defending champion Ralph McElvenny and Hugh Lynch all worked under wraps.

In a match that should be chock full of all that is best in competitive tennis, Ralph McElvenny will lock racquets with Lieut. John McCue this afternoon at 5:30. The battle of the "Mac's" has been anticipated with a great deal of interest since the start of the tournament, with odds about even.

Because of the committee's eagerness to whittle down the large singles field, only about half the first round doubles matches were played yesterday, with form holding sway in every counter.

Yesterday's Results.

Culpeper Pitcher Blanks Orange With Only 1 Hit

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Culpeper, Va., June 24.—Approximately 250 local fans were in Gordonsville yesterday to see Culpeper shut out the Orange team, 4-0.

Waugh, Culpeper's 19-year-old pitcher, barely missed a no-hit game when Mundy doubled in the second inning. He held the Orange club at his mercy for the remainder of the game, which drew a crowd of 800. Culpeper plays Waynesboro here tomorrow.

Action Assured On Season Split Plan

North Virginia Loop Head Intimates Decision by End of Week.

JAMES BUCHANAN, president of the Northern Virginia League, intimated that official action may be taken by the end of this week on the generally prevailing sentiment for a split season in the year's schedule.

Walter Ruding, manager of the league-leading Ballston A. C., whose team has won eight straight and is four games ahead of its nearest competitor in the Red Section, was the first to come forward with this suggestion to renew interest. J. M. Roberson, pilot of Fairfax Station, now setting the pace in the other section, also expressed approval.

"This fine gesture of sportsmanship on the part of the Ballston manager would be a fine thing for the league and undoubtedly accomplish its purpose of rehabilitating the lagging interest of some of the teams," Buchanan said last night. "I am sure most of the managers will entertain the idea and as soon as I hear from the teams I shall call a meeting immediately."

The possibility of a split season has already reacted favorably upon several teams in the Red Section, who have been playing a better game in the last three weeks with the hope of making a fresh start.

If the league takes official action the first-half season would end July 7.

Georgetown Is Out Of School Singles

Seeded Stars Victorious in Evanston Matches.

By the Associated Press.

Evanston, Ill., June 24.—There were no Jimmy Braddocks nor Sammy Parks on the field, so the seeded stars in the National Intercollegiate Singles Tennis Championship romped into the third round of play as the battle for the title vacated by Gene Mako, of Southern California, opened on the clay courts of Northwestern University today.

The only semblance of an upset out of the 44 matches was the victory of Sam Lee, of Stanford, over William T. Tilden 3d, of Princeton, nephew of the great star of the courts, after a hard three-set engagement, 4—6, 6—2, 6—4.

Out of 37 universities and colleges represented in the entries, 15 lost their entire teams through eliminations in the first two rounds. The most prominent of the eliminated were Navy, Illinois, Georgetown, Michigan, Michigan State, North Carolina, Pennsylvania and the University of Washington. Stanford and Georgia Tech led the field with four survivors each.

Holiday Declared For Valley Game

Special Dispatch to The Post.

West Point, Va., June 24.—Chesapeake has been undergoing strenuous drills this week preparing for Wednesday's game here with the highly rated Culpeper club, champion of the Valley League. Manager Bill Gwathmey will pitch his ace, Paul Folliard.

Culpeper defeated Chesapeake three straight last year.

About 3,000 are expected to see Wednesday's game. All business firms in West Point will be closed during the game, the town declaring a half-day holiday. The game starts at 3 p. m.

Midland Team Scores First Win in League

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westernport, Md., June 24.—In the Cumberland and George Creek League Midland Indians defeated the Westvaco team, 10-3, to cop their first contest of the year. Pat Corrigan limited the local team to three hits. Garcia, Westvaco catcher, accounted for two runs when he clouted a homer in the seventh with one on. Corrigan for the winners had two doubles and he also scored three runs.

The Malloys Steal Spotlight in College Golf

Johnny Fischer (left), intercollegiate champion in 1932 and former Walker Cup player, watches Joe Lynch, Georgetown captain and president of the association. Both did well in the qualifying play, Fischer carding a 77 and Lynch a 75.

Fischer, who has an extremely fast backswing, was hurrying many of his shots, and hitting in back of the ball, particularly on the stretch. For instance on the eighteenth, he chopped out a huge divot off the tee, getting off a wobbly drive, and rallying to carve out his par 4. Fischer, however, had only one 3-putt green.

Putter Fails Lynch.

The Georgetown hope, Lynch, had to contend with a none too trusty putter, which cost him strokes on at least five holes.

A prodigious tee shot on the eighteenth ended up a few feet from the green, and Lynch chipped up nicely for his birdie 3—his second birdie of the round.

Starting 5—5, Fischer picked up a birdie on the 476-yard eighth and he failed to collect another one during the day, as he went over par on five holes.

Ed White, crack Texas captain, played the back nine poorly for a 40, and finished with 77. The runner-up in the 1934 championship didn't find the greens much to his liking, and missed numerous short putts.

Two other favorites, Walter Emery, champion in 1933, and Johnny Banks, Notre Dame captain, scored 79's in none too impressive performances.

Riegel Shoots an 84.

The South's new sensation, Bobby Riegel, of University of Richmond, who won the Southern Amateur in his home town last Saturday, got off to a weird start, shooting 7—7, five over par. He never recovered as his silken putting touch and crisp approach game failed to click. Riegel finished with 44-40—84, and must make a terrific comeback today if he hopes to be one of the 32 qualifiers.

Perhaps the biggest disappointment from a team standpoint was the poor showing of the six golfers from Stanford, who scored well in practice rounds, and were figured to go a long ways in the championship. Only Jack Hoerner, 195-pound red-head, was able to break 80. Hoerner scored a 77, but the rest of his teammates were way off their stride.

Tommy Dwyer, Stanford captain, shot an 84. Don Edwards, who looked like a sure thing to break par, blew up, and took 86 shots. Verne Stewart, misjudging green after green, scored 80, and Morse Erskine, whose 69 was low in practice rounds, took 81. John Halaby had 82.

Michigan Team in Lead.

As expected, Michigan's Wolverines howled their challenge so successfully that their team went into command of an 11-stroke lead by virtue of a four-man total of 302—Malloy, with 72; Koscis, with 74; Fischer, 77, and Dana Seeley, 79.

Georgia Tech was second with 313 and Oklahoma next with 314.

Georgetown's golfers fared rather well, Lynch scoring 75; Kenny Cocoran, 79; Dick Kreuzberg, 80, and Jim Lee, 81. The Hoyas are in fourth place with 315.

35 Players Under 80.

Only 35 golfers were able to break 80, and indications are that many of the players whose scores skyrocketed to the 90s, will not answer the roll call today. Virtually the entire George Washington University team has withdrawn.

A threat to intercollegiate honors developed when Tommy Draper, jr., of the University of Washington, St. Louis, staged a remarkable two-hole rally on the first nine to set off the spark for a good round of 75. Draper was 2 over par as he reached the eighth hole. Here he banged out two lusty wallops and was down for an eagle 3. On the ninth he stuck his tee shot 10 feet from the pin, and nailed his putt for a birdie deuce to go out in 37.

H. L. Beyer, jr., Penn State athlete, fired a 75, with a 36 on the closing nine to become enmeshed in a three-way tie for fifth place. Georgetown's Lynch shot the third 75.

Ten scored in the 77 class. They were Bob McLaughlin, of Buffalo; C. N. Dannals, jr., of Georgia Tech, who came spinning over the stretch with a 36; Billy Street, also of Georgia Tech; Claude McKee, of Pittsburgh; Ed White, of Texas; G. A. Mennard, of Penn State; Bill Flynn, of Northwestern; Jack Hoerner, of Stanford; Wilson Marks, of Princeton, and Fischer.

Collects 4 Birdies.

Jack Malloy's card showed 4 birdies. His first came on the third, where he sank a 15-footer for a deuce. On the sixth he laid his niblick second 3 feet from the pin, and knocked in the putt for a birdie 3. The Princeton golfer didn't start well, taking a 6 when he missed a No. 2 iron shot and a 3-foot putt for his par. He rounded the turn with a 36, 1 under par.

On the tenth, Malloy was on the green in 2, and sank an 8-footer for a birdie 3. His mashie second soared over the eleventh green, and he found himself stymied by a tree. The result was that the young man took a six, 2 over par. The memory of that eleventh was such that Malloy took five strokes on the short twelfth. He was trapped on his tee shot, and failed to get out with his second.

The Princeton golfer played the next five holes in regulation figures, and the coup de grace came on the eighteenth, where he plowed into his tee shot, which reached the green 10 feet from the pin. It was an eagle duce. He was the only man to drive the green and get the eagle.

Malloy, No. 2, meaning Woody, of Michigan, had a 2-stroke lead on his Princeton rival after he left the first green. Little Woody sank a 5-footer for a birdie 4, and pitched dead for one putt and a 4 on the second. He sank an 8-footer for a birdie 3 on the fourth, and parred the next two holes. Woody missed his second on the seventh and took a 5, 1 over, but he came back with a fine recovery from a trap on the eighth hole to sink a 12-footer and register a birdie 4.

Goes Out in 36.

Malloy looked over a 5-footer for a par on the ninth, but missed his putt and took a 4, one over, to go out in 36.

Over the green on his second on the eleventh, he scored a 5, one over par. A trapped tee shot cost him a 4 on the short twelfth. He recovered nicely for his par 5 on the long thirteenth and his deadly chipping enabled him to preserve his par for the next four holes.

Told that he needed his birdie to tie Malloy, No. 1, of Princeton, Woody trundled in a 10-footer for his 3, a 36 for the back nine and a par-equaling 72 for the round.

Young Haas had seven pars on the first nine. He went over on the seventh and picked up a stroke with a birdie on the eighth. He started back 5—5—4—three over par—but rolled in a 25-footer for a birdie on the thirteenth and shot the next five holes in one under par, with a birdie 3 on the home hole.

Yates Is Back in 38.

Champion Yates was guilty of three-putt greens on the second and fourth and a six on the first hole. He holed out a 45-footer for a deuce on the ninth to go out in 40, and played the back nine in 38 with nary a birdie to his credit on that side.

Fischer's crack-up on the seventeenth hole was indeed discouraging. He had been over on the tenth, where he took a 5, and for the next six holes he clicked off his pars. A great approach from heavy rough gave him his 4 on the sixteenth. But the seventeenth—that was the blow. Here he knocked his tee shot into the rough. His second, hole high, hit the left side of the edge of the green and kicked with amazing rapidity 25 yards down into rough. A tree was in front of him. Instead of playing a low winging shot, Fischer arched the ball. It hit the leaves of the tree and dropped 15 feet from the green. He reached the green in 4 and was down for his 6.

With scores of many favorites running high, indications are that 158 might play off today. The rain didn't help any, and another repetition of yesterday's performances, and the sons of Stanford, Michigan, Yale, Princeton and other favored colleges will be broken-hearted.

nearly a quarter of a century, made sensational recoveries from bunkers for pars at the third and fifth and then planted his tee shot at the short sixth, 2 feet from the cup for his only birdie on the first nine. He brought down an eagle three on the 480-yard tenth with two powerful woods and a 12-foot putt and then bagged birdies on the twelfth, sixteenth and seventeenth.

Cedric Sayner, a British professional from Birkdale, near Southport, chased Smith to the wire with a 68. Half the field made a shooting gallery out of Gullane. Out of 24 players who shot 71 or better over Gullane and Muirfield, the two trial courses, all but four played Gullane. Those playing Muirfield were handicapped by a heavy mist and an occasional cold, drizzling rain.

Richard Burton, a young British pro, who led the Muirfield brigade with a 2 under par 70, established a new competitive record for the altered course, but he was three strokes short of equaling Walter Hagen's 67 in the second round of the championship there six years ago. Three other Britons, including Cotton, the champion and bettings odds choice, managed to snare 71s.

Picard, Lawson Off Game.

Those who got tangled up in the Muirfield's traps and other hazards included tall Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., rated by British critics as having the best chance of the invaders from the United States, and William Lawson Little, jr., of San Francisco, twice winner of the British amateur title and reigning American titleholder.

Both had wobbly rounds, but no fear was felt about their qualifying chances. Strangely enough, Little and Picard had extreme difficulty keeping their tee shots on the fairways. Little admitted somewhat disconsolately that he hit only two fairways on the entire round. As the result of their below-standard performances, Little did a 39—39—78 and Picard was one stroke lower, with 39—38—77.

Valley League Flag Race Is Tied

Front Royal Nine Climbs to Place in Line Beside Culpeper.

*Front Royal will have standing of 7-0 if protest of Heurich using ineligible player is formally upheld.

HARRISONBURG, Va., June 24. Front Royal halted the victorious march of the Culpeper champions and climbed into a tie for first place in the Valley League over the week-end.

Front Royal will hold the lead with seven wins and no losses if the league directors formally approve the protest against Heurich for using an ineligible player in the only game dropped by the All-Stars.

Pasting Walter Beall for 13 hits while Cassell and Stankus limited the opposition to nine safeties, Front Royal became the first club to defeat the champions. Then on the following day, Front Royal gained a 1-to-0 verdict over Harrisonburg to entrench themselves in first place.

Another "first" during the week was that of Staunton in registering its initial victory of the season. Its Augusta County rival, Waynesboro, was the victim by an 8-to-1 score. But Waynesboro, in third place, came back to trim Heurich, 9 to 3, while Staunton faltered to lose another game to Charlottesville.

Night baseball in the Valley circuit was inaugurated in Harrisonburg last week with the home club scoring over Staunton, Charlottesville and Heurich. These three games attracted more than 3,500 fans. One night game set a new record for league strikeouts when Lefty Hutchison, of Harrisonburg, fanned 17, and Pendleton, his southpaw rival from Charlottesville, struck out 13. But Harrisonburg and Heurich amassed 29 hits in the Saturday night game.

Games this week:

Tuesday—Waynesboro at Culpeper.

Wednesday—Waynesboro at Charlottesville.

Thursday—Charlottesville at Harrisonburg; Heurich at Orange; Front Royal at Staunton.

Tournament Collegians Come to Great Grief On Unlucky—and Too Long—Thirteenth Hole

THE thirteenth hole at Congressional Country Club, which measures close to 600 yards, is proving a veritable nightmare to the golfers in the National Intercollegiate championship.

Twenty-three 6s were made there yesterday along with 12 7s and five 8s. It's a good thing the wind wasn't wrong.

It is interesting to note that only six out of a field of 120 were able to snare birdies on the thirteenth—which certainly is living up to its unlucky name. A birdie fell to Freddie Haas, thanks to a 25-foot putt.

Lanky Charlie Yates, who swings his club and putts a la Bobby Jones, had to struggle for his 78. The breaks weren't with Georgia Tech's Charlie. On the twelfth, a 230-yarder, Yates was 50 feet from the pin on his tee shot. Johnny Banks, of Notre Dame, who played with him, was in the trap near the green. Banks blasted out and lacked two inches of going into the cup for a birdie, while Yates' putt for a birdie stopped on the lip of the cup.

A cross wind didn't help the collegians on the first hole, which measures 556 yards. More than three-fourths of the players started off by slicing their drives into the rough.

Joe Lynch, of Georgetown, and Johnny Fischer, of Michigan, commanded the biggest gallery of the day. Lynch, winner of the intercollegiate driving championship in Cleveland last year, outdrove Johnny on numerous holes. Fischer lost lots of distance because of an attack of hooking and slicing—which never stopped. It started pouring when Lynch and Fischer reached the seventh green, and the crowd ran for shelter. Fischer donned his cap and raincoat, but Lynch sought the aid of a multi-colored umbrella.

Rain not only caught up with Lynch and Fischer, but many other stars, the Stanford boys in particular, who probably are not good "mudders." Eddie Twiggs, Stanford coach, who had his boys on the scene of battle earlier than any other team in the field, was mighty disappointed at the showing of his six players. Paining Twiggs no end was the 86 scored by Don Edwards, who must shoot at least a 72 to qualify.

Aulick Burke, William and Mary golf captain, who has a job with a hotel at Virginia Beach, came to Congressional yesterday with the idea of getting a practice round. Burke said he thought the tournament wasn't scheduled to start until today. He had been at the club only an hour before Starter Russ Hollebaugh had him tee off. Burke, a Petersburg boy, did well, scoring a brace of 80's.

Someone walked off with Crawford Rainwater's trusty putter, according to the Emery golfer. When Rainwater called for his putter on the first hole his caddy told him it was missing. He used an old one for the first nine, and borrowed his brother's—Brown—using it to good advantage on the back nine. Out in 42, Rainwater played in the rain, and scored an 82, with a 7 on the seventeenth hole.

The college boys are gonna step out tonight. A big dance is being thrown for the lads at Congressional and thoughts of tee shots, mashie shots and putts will turn to fox trots, waltzes and the shag.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

FREDERICK, Md., June 24.—Brunswick defeated Taneytown, 2 to 0; Union Bridge downed New Windsor, 3 to 0; Middletown set back Emmitsburg, 8 to 4 and Thurmont took the measure of Woodsboro, 8 to 7, in the second round of the County League. It was the first game for Emmitsburg, which took over the franchise of the Frederick club.

The Brunswick-Tanneytown tilt was a pitchers' battle between Ecker and Younkins with honors slightly in favor of the latter. Younkins retired the first 18 batters to face him. Brunswick had men on bases in every inning except the third, but were unable to score only in the eighth when singles by M. Younkins, Taylor and Merriman yielded the two runs that won the game.

Minnick hurled one of the best games of his career against New Windsor, allowing but three scattered hits. Union Bridge clinched the game in the first inning on singles by Nicodemus, Skinner and Kiss. One more was added in the third frame after which both hurlers settled down and neither side scored the remainder of the game.

Trailing by four runs, Thurmont launched a batting rally in the ninth inning that accounted for five runs. Up to the eighth frame Smith held the Mountaineers to one run. He weakened in the ninth and doubles by Leatherman and N. Shaffer, singles by Flory, Birely, Creeger, Clark and Laym

Bonura's Homer Wins for White Sox

Red Sox Bow As Series Is Squared

Cronin's Error Is Factor in Defeat; Marberry One of Umpires.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 24.—Zeke Bonura's thirteenth home run with two men on base and faulty fielding by Manager Joe Cronin and Mel Almada, of the Red Sox, today enabled the White Sox to beat the Bostonians, 6 to 4, and gain an even split in the series.

Boston tied the score at 4-all on Almada's triple with two on in the seventh, but after Rip Radcliff had doubled to open the home half of the inning, Cronin allowed Haas' drive to go through him and Radcliff, who had been bunted to third, scored the deciding run. Haas was picked off base, but Bonura singled and scored when Simmons also singled and Almada relayed the ball wildly to the infield.

Lefty Grove, who replaced Dusty Rhodes at the start of the seventh, was the victim.

Fred Marberry, veteran pitcher who was given his unconditional release by Detroit a fortnight ago, made his debut as an American League umpire in today's game, working at third base along with the regular trio of arbiters originally assigned to the series.

Tamulis Defeats Indians for Yanks

Snaps Cleveland's Winning Streak, Allowing 8 Hits.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, June 24.—Vito Tamulis, the Yankees' brilliant young Lithuanian southpaw, ended New York's three-game losing streak and snapped the Cleveland Indians' winning string at four games as he pitched the American League leaders to a 4-to-1 victory over the second-place club. The triumph stretched the Yanks' advantage to four games.

In chalking up his seventh conquest of the season as compared to one setback, Tamulis limited the Indians to eight scattered hits, three of which came off the bat of Joe Vosmik. It also was the third time that he has turned back Walter Johnson's men in as many starts against them.

Let's Go Fishing . . .

By M. W. Meier.

IT IS utterly impossible to list all the successful bay fishing parties who went out over the past week-end and who reported to this column. Apparently everyone managed to land all the toothsome croakers they wanted.

There wasn't an idle boat or fishing captain on the Chesapeake from Saturday morning on. As usual, the best catches and the biggest fish seemed to go to those who fished either at night or else in early mrning.

Southwest and Northwest Middles and the Gooses easily produced the best fish although every other location delivered up its quota.

A party consisting of Robert Woolley, Dr. Ernest Gruening, Bert Henderson and Col. W. T. Chantland, spent several hours late Saturday afternoon and early Sunday morning between No Point Light and Northwest Middles. They landed 11 fine blues, averaging 4 pounds, 126 croaker and 2 weaks of fair size. They reported vast schools of blues with indifferent appetites. They went out with Capt. Taft Tippett, of Ridge. His number, by the way, is Great Mills 16-F-12.

Party Lands Plenty.

Another successful local party comprised Pop Brown, Lew Perron, John McDonnell, J. M. Cornell, Ben J. Morris and A. Dronnenburg. Going out from Kenwood Beach with Capt. Woodward, this party brought in 301 large hardhead and 2 weaks.

Capt. Robert E. Lee, of Shady Side, Md., reports that a few blues were landed from his boats over Sunday, in addition to great strings of croakers. The captain is located on West River and has a fleet of 14 well-equipped boats.

Motion-Picture Party.

At the last minute, due to the tremendous interest of readers of this column in the motion-pictures we are showing tonight, we have been obliged to secure a larger hall.

Instead of being shown in the Air Corps Projection Room, Munitions Building, we are obliged to use the auditorium of the National Museum, Tenth street and Constitution avenue. Use the Constitution avenue entrance and try to be there as close to 7:30 p. m. as you can.

Three thrilling reels of big game fishing with light tackle at sea will be shown. In addition there will be a reel or two of the Northwest trout streams. The program will last about an hour and a half and you won't have to listen to any speeches.

This is a get-together of the anglers of Washington and surrounding sections and there will be no charges. It has been made possible through the decency of a heap of fine sportsmen.

Cubs Whip Giants In 10-Inning Game

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 24.—The Chicago Cubs got away to a 4-run lead today, but were forced to come from behind and go ten innings before they defeated the league-leading New York Giants, 10 to 9, in a free-slugging contest that saw 30 hits, including three homers.

The home runs played a big part in the scoring, but it was Frank Demaree's single off Frank Gabler, fourth of the New York hurlers to see action, that chased Auguie Galan home with the deciding run in the extra frame.

Regatta Association Meets, Forecasts Biggest Cup Race

THE biggest, most exciting and most successful President's Cup Regatta in the history of the local water fixture was forecast for this year at a meeting of the President's Cup Regatta Association yesterday.

"The production schedules of boat and marine engine manufacturers are away above those for any previous year," explained L. Gordon Leech, executive secretary and chairman of the race committee. "The Dodge plant is working overtime, building cruisers, an entirely new boat for them, as well as speed boats. The Chris-Craft Co. is working full for the first time since 1929. These are only a few of the indications pointing to greater interest in motor boating."

Leech also explained to the meeting that inasmuch as this was the last year of the present restrictions on Gold Cup craft, every driver in the country owning this type of boat was expected to enter the President's Cup race.

Financed by Members.

John A. Remon, president and general chairman of the association, told the meeting that it was hoped to finance the regatta almost entirely or to a large extent through membership fees, rather than contributions.

Remon also said that President Roosevelt would make every effort to attend the water classic, which is scheduled for September 26, 27, 28 and 29. Swimming and sailing events are slated for September 26 and 27, respectively. The last two days of the regatta will be dedicated to motor-boat events, rowing races and canoe races.

Detroit Whips Nats in 14th, By 9 to 8

before Whitehill could get anybody out. Auker was permitted to bat for himself and it was on his fly to right that the Tigers emerged triumphant.

Bridges contributed four walks toward those four runs scored by the Nats in the second inning, when they boosted their lead to 5-1. Before, after and between Bridges' splurges of generosity Schulte singled, Kuhel singled, Myer singled and Goose Goslin bounced a throw from the outfield over Catcher Hayworth's head.

The Tigers caught up with the Nats in the fifth. After pitching three scoreless innings, Whitehill walked Bridges with one out, pitched a single to Fox, struck out Walker and then filled the bases by walking Gehringer. Greenberg drove two runs home with a double to left and Goslin drove home two more with a single to right.

Thus it was, with the score 5-5, that the game wore into the thirteenth, but Whitehill was pitching his heart out to keep the Nats on even terms with the Tigers in the face of those ten scoreless innings Tommy Bridges hurled after the second.

Lots of Good Luck.

Bridges was the recipient of a lucky break in the eighth when Umpire Harry Geisel called Ossie Bluege out despite the fact that he had beaten out a hit to deep short by a full step, but it was in the next inning that Bridges and the Tigers found themselves fairly dripping with good luck.

That was the inning in whcih the Nats failed to score, despite three hits off Bridges. Buddy Myer led off with a single and, with one out, Travis drove a terrific single to center, but Myer stumbled and fell sprawling on his way to third and was barely able to scramble back to second. Thus, when Schulte's short fly dropped safely in center field, Myer was not in a position to score.

At this point with the bases full and only one out, Bolton obligingly hit into a double play for the Tigers.

But for seven innings after the Tigers tied the score in the fifth, Whitehill was superb. The first man up in the seventh walked, but couldn't get beyond second and when Fox led off the ninth with a single, the top of the batting order couldn't get him home against Whitehill, who struck out Goslin for the third out.

Even when Cecil Travis made a town-lot muff on the pop fly of Bill Rogell that opened the tenth inning, Whitehill was in no mood to give up. The Tigers couldn't get beyond second.

And then when Pete Fox led off the eleventh inning with a triple to right, you couldn't get a plugged-nickel bet covered that Whitehill would not pull out of that hole. But he did. He forced Walker to hit one back into the box, intentionally walked Gehringer, made Greenberg pop up and Goslin ground to Bluege, as even Detroit fans applauded.

But eventually came the fourteenth and that one Detroit run that separated Whitehill from success and the Nats from another ball game.

Profit Taking Halts Advance In Stock Mart

Selling at Close Leaves Prices on Slightly Lower Level.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 24.—The stock market appeared today to be engaged in digesting some of its recent gains. A relatively steady course during most of the day was succeeded late in the session by mild profit-taking which left most active issues a little lower on balance.

Price changes in nearly all leaders were fractional, and there was a bit of selective buying here and there. As a whole, declines were only slightly more numerous than advances.

Measured by the Associated Press average of 60 stocks, the market was off .3 of a point at 44.9. Turnover in the stock exchange was 1,116,670 shares. The best activity came in the first hour of trading, when most prices ranged from steady to firm.

The day's business was sufficiently mixed to offer market forces little of a definite nature in which to sink their teeth. The magazine Steel suggested in regard to steel operations that "the transition from June to July apparently will not be accompanied by any such precipitate drop as developed last year when the rate fell from 53 to 26 per cent."

Lack of Heat Advances Corn

Muddy Fields in Wide Areas Hamper Cultivation.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 24.—Corn played the major role in the grain markets today, developing notable strength from reports the corn belt has urgent need of dry, hot weather.

Throughout wide areas, corn fields were reported as in a muddy condition, making cultivation difficult or impossible for at least the time being. Bearish sentiment as to wheat was decidedly tempered toward the last by upturns of corn values and by the fact that hedging pressure from newly harvested domestic winter wheat was less in evidence today than looked for.

Corn closed firm ¼@1⅛ above Saturday's finish; September 75⅛@75¾, wheat ⅛@⅞ down, 80⅛@80¼, oats unchanged to ⅛ higher, and provisions varying from 10 cents decline to 12 cents gain.

Rallies of wheat quotations were aided by smallness of world shipments of wheat, together with 2,000,000 bushels decrease of stocks of wheat afloat for importing countries.

Silver Drops to 70¼, Lowest in 2 Months

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 24.—Imported bar silver for domestic commercial use fell to 1¾ cents today to 70¼ cents an ounce. The lowest recorded since 69⅞ on April 23.

The slump in the New York price followed a dip of 1 13-16 in the London market to an equivalent of 70.08 cents an ounce and declines in the Montreal silver futures market.

Net income of the Washington Rapid Transit Co. during May was more than double the income of the corresponding month of 1934, according to the month's report of operations filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission. Income was set at $5,572, as compared with a net of $2,142, during the same month of last year

Operating revenues of the Sixteenth street bus line in May totaled $40,396.47 in comparison with $37,070.46 a year ago, an increase of $3,326.01. Many Large Holders of Weak Railroad Bonds Would Postpone Reorganizations Until Earnings Turn Upward; Resist Plans so Far Published.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, June 24.—The majority opinion among officials of large financial institutions holding substantial blocks of defaulted railroad bonds remains that the time is not yet propitious for carrying through railroad reorganizations. They express decided approval of the warning of Coordinator Eastman last week against hasty carrier reorganizations.

Nevertheless, if Congress should pass the pending bill to facilitate railroad financial reorganization, it is held likely that three or four large systems may be "put through the wringer" by the end of the year. This will be a result of the persistent pressure of Jesse H. Jones for quick reorganization. Presumably eager to transform existing R. F. C. advances to weak railroads into marketable prior lien bonds as soon as possible, Mr. Jones has spurred managements of the St. Paul, Western Pacific, Chicago & North Western and other weak road systems to promulgate plans and to initiate active discussions with bondholder representatives to obtain their approval.

Reasons for Speed Held Gone.

Formerly, there were two good reasons for speedy reorganization. Operation by equity receivers was expensive, and reorganization, by providing cash through assessment of stockholders and rehabilitating the credit of the railroad, made possible the financing of needed improvements and betterments.

Now, however, Section 77 of the bankruptcy act avoids material added expense while the property is under the court's jurisdiction. Furthermore, assessment of stockholders or public financing for reorganized railroads is regarded as out of the question under prevailing conditions.

Hence, holders of securities scheduled to be disturbed are eager to postpone reorganization until earnings recover. Bondholders hope an upturn in earnings will enable them to escape drastic reduction in their claim to fixed interest, while stockholders could then make a stronger case against a sharp reduction or elimination of their equity. The further decline in railroad earnings this year has strengthened the view that delay is desirable before reorganizing.

A second fundamental factor making for delay in railroad reorganization is the character of the plans brought forward by railroad managements in the case of the Missouri Pacific, Denver & Rio Grande, Western Pacific and Chicago & Northwestern. The general principle of these plans is to reduce fixed interest payments to bondholders by converting most of the fixed charges, temporarily or permanently, into contingent obligations, payable only if earned. The stockholders, on the other hand, while they may have the number of their shares reduced, undergo little real sacrifice.

Institutional holders of railroad bonds are abandoning the relatively passive attitude often typical of them in the past. They have opposed several features of the plans so far published, and have sought to effect major changes in them. It has been suggested that disturbed bondholders obtain conversion or other privileges, so as to give them a share in the future prosperity of the road in return for their immediate sacrifice of claims to fixed interest. Secondly, they have sought voting power, in order to participate in the future management of the railroad and so obtain fuller consideration for bondholder interests. They also have favored sinking funds which would utilize part of the earnings of the railroad in periods of prosperity to pay off funded debt through purchase in the open market.

The basic argument advanced is that stockholders no longer pay assessments to furnish new capital, as was formerly typical, and so their sacrifice should be correspondingly greater.

Novel Principle in Northwestern Plan.

Another aspect of the reorganization plans so far proposed by managements which promises considerable delay is the relative treatment accorded various layers of bonds. Thus, the proposed Chicago & Northwestern plan lays down the novel principle that some part of the interest due various grades of bonds should be paid, junior bonds simply suffering a greater sacrifice than senior issues.

The traditional rule is to withhold fixed interest from junior bonds where issues senior to them are disturbed to a substantial degree.

Finally, the question is asked in conservative quarters whether several of the plans so far proposed give adequate relief from excessive fixed charges. Thus, the St. Paul plan would reduce interest charges to something over $7,000,000 annually for a few years. Last year, however, earnings available for charges were barely $8,000,000, and they have been running at a substantially lower level so far this year. Similarly, the Chicago & Northwestern, which owes the RFC some $45,000,000, earned only about $8,000,000 last year, and yet it is proposed to have, and this at present charges of about $17,000,000 for a period of years.

4.4 Billions D. C. Insurance Sales in 1934

Total Exceeds the Previous Year by More Than 200 Millions.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Insurance sales in the District of Columbia during 1934 reached a record total of nearly $4,500,000,000 and increased by more than $200,000,000 the sales of the previous year, Insurance Commissioner John A. Marshall disclosed yesterday.

Marshall.

In his annual report to the District Commissioners, Marshall listed 480 insurance companies of all classifications in operation here on December 31, 1934. These companies collected an aggregate of $34,707,306 in premiums during the year and paid losses of $12,455,241. Total face value of the policies sold was $4,409,133,396 against the previous year's total of $4,188,616,868.

Segregating the insurance classifications, the report showed that fire, marine and inland policies scored the largest gain, increasing from a face value of $4,060,875,978 during 1933 to $4,270,994,485 in the past year. Life policies showed the next highest increase, jumping from $124,115,264 to $134,437,469. Fraternal underwriters were slightly lower, with contracts of $2,230,521 as against $2,305,086 the previous year.

Life insurance companies operating here collected premiums of $23,610,700 during the year and paid off losses of $7,667,834. Marine and fire underwriters were paid premiums of $3,860,518 and liquidated losses of $1,295,218.

Marshall pointed out that in the course of the year 10 companies dropped out while 12 new companies were licensed to do business. The number of credit unions operating under supervision of the Insurance Department remained unchanged at 20.

Substantially higher standards in the local insurance field during the year were declared by Marshall to have resulted from the passage of the local Life Insurance Act last spring. A similar act to more adequately regulate fire, marine, and casualty companies operating here is now being drafted by Assistant Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal in collaboration with Marshall.

Taxes and fees collected by the insurance office during the year totaled $462,489, an increase of $25,116 over the previous year's total. Expenses involved in administrating the department were $20,475, of which $18,009 was spent for salaries. An increased appropriation for this branch of the District government has been pushed by the Washington Board of Trade, the D. C. Life Underwriters Association, and the Insurance Club of Washington.

Marshall, in closing his report, called the attention of the District Commissioners to the fact that an increased appropriation was necessary to effectively discharge the duties of the department. He also recommended immediate action on Federal legislation to curb illicit mail order companies, operating here and elsewhere, which, he asserted, were fleecing the public out of hundreds of thousands of dollars annually.

Year's U. S. Maturities Are $5,998,406,130

Obligations of the United States Government in the hands of the public and which will mature within 12 months amount to $5,998,406,130. They consist of Treasury bonds, consols, notes and non-interest-bearing discount bills.

The Fourth Liberty 4¼s outstanding, which have been reduced to about $1,278,000,000 through redemptions, are now called for October 15.

Committee for Nation Quotes Sir A. M. Samuel on Stabilization.

New York, June 24.—In a telegram sent today to the chairmen of the Senate and House Banking Committees and all members of Congress, the Committee for the Nation says:

"This week's press dispatches quote Senator Key Pittman as saying that the use of the United States stabilization fund to support the gold franc 'will result in bringing stabilization a good deal nearer.' The Committe for the Nation, speaking for 2,000 industrial executives and associated leaders of organized agriculture, protests emphatically against such international stabilization efforts.

"It will profit us if we take one look at ourselves through English eyes. Speaking in the House of Commons on May 21, Sir A. M. Samuel, Undersecretary of State for Foreign Affairs, said:

"'We know that our friends, the Americans, are really children in matters of pure economics. They do not know what they are doing. They are merely reeds shaken by the winds of political pressure.

"'Has Mr. Morgenthau taken his proposal to its logical conclusion? If we stabilize is he prepared on behalf of his Government to say that they will lend abroad? The next thing we have to ask is, if Mr. Morgenthau stabilizes, will he allow the world to send goods to the United States? These are the prerequisites.

"'We must be put into such a position that the world shall have a guarantee that no change of electoral opinion or political pressure in the United States will again compel the Government of that country to do what Mr. Roosevelt has done with monetary experiments. We must be put in a position to say that whatever arrangement is made between us and the United States it shall be of such a kind that good faith in the stabilization contract shall be kept and secured against every risk. We are dealing with a people who are like children in the handling of monetary problems.'"

Bonds Continue Upward Course To New Highs

Trading Centered Upon Junior Utility and Rail Issues.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 24.—The corporate bond market continued its clearly defined upward trend today despite a rather bad spill by a few recently favored issues that had advanced too rapidly over the past week. U. S. Governments were moderately higher.

The Associated Press average, of 20 rails advanced two-tenths of a point to 83.5, and the averages for both utilities and industrials penetrated new 1935 highs with a gain of one-tenth of a point at 95.3 and 97.1, respectively. Low-yield bonds remained stationary, while ten foreign loans advanced three-tenths of a point to 69.1 largely as a result of uniform strength in South American issues. Transfers aggregated $12,564,000, par value, compared with $12,424,000 last Friday.

Cotton Market

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 24.—Cotton held within a 10-point range today, closing steady at net declines of 6 to 10 points.

Early selling on relatively easy Liverpool cables and the weather news sent prices about 10 to 13 points below Saturday's closing quotations, but there appeared to be a good demand for the July position and prices rallied a little after the forenoon pressure subsided. July recovered all but a point of its early losses and later months sold within 3 or 4 points of the previous finals, but scattering liquidation continued and recoveries were not fully maintained.

Garbage Men In New Orleans To Strike Again

Walkout Set for Today as Collectors Revolt at FERA Wages.

By the United Press.

New Orleans, La., June 24.—Garbage collectors here will strike again tomorrow rather than accept employment from the FERA, a spokesman announced late today.

Commissioner of Public Works Joseph P. Skelly said the jobs would be filled with other workers, so that the city's health would not be endangered as it was when garbage piled up in gutters during a one-day strike last week.

The FERA stepped in with Federal funds to end the strike last week by paying salaries of the garbage collectors the city couldn't pay. The city is in financial straits because of a political battle with Senator Huey P. Long. The Kingfish's State administration has harassed the city treasury at every turn in an effort to drive out Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley.

C. Parks, spokesman for the garbage collectors, announced renewal of the strike tomorrow after a conference with Skelly late today.

Parks told Skelly the collectors wanted a six-day week, time and a half for holiday work and the regular city wage scale of $3 a day for helpers and $3.50 for drivers.

The men were put on a five-day basis several months ago. The FERA made its wage scale $10 a month under the old city schedule.

Skely insisted that other workers would be found to keep up the garbage collection without a lapse.

Paid only part of their wages this month and nearly two months behind since the first of the year, the garbage collectors refused to work last Friday until something was done about their back pay.

In Washington, Frank H. Peterman, FERA administrator for Louisiana, took over garbage collection as a FERA project, together with nine other departments concerned with health.

This was interpreted in some quarters as a left-handed blow at Long, enemy of the National Administration. Mayor Walmsley has resisted Long's State dictatorship and this warfare brought the city into its present straitened financial circumstances.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

STRANGE as it seems, the very wind that wrought havoc with the clove tree groves of Zanzibar in 1872 brought new prosperity to the tiny nearby island of Pemba—and led to the eventual establishment of a near monopoly on clove production for the island.

Up to the time of the hurricane, Pemba produced little but coconuts. After the storm, however, when the price of cloves increased sharply, the planters on Pemba Island cut down their palm trees and planted cloves instead. Since then this island has produced about 70 per cent of the world supply—and, strange as it seems, the island is only 10 miles wide and about 40 miles long.

• • • •

Anne of Denmark, queen of James I of England daughter of Frederick II of Denmark and Norway, and mother of King Charles I, spent her money so freely that creditors shook their heads when asked to provide funds for her funeral. Consequently, after the queen died, her funeral had to be delayed until her financial difficulties could be straightened out.

Anne is recognized by historians as a capable queen—intelligent, tactful, a good wife and mother—but she gloried in jewelry, clothes, and expensive furnishings. Her expenditures offered a sharp contrast with those of the frugal Queen Elizabeth. Anne was $50,000 in debt before she died.

Once Overs

By H. I. Phillips

Uncle Sam As the "Angel."

Washington is expected to grant several million dollars under FERA to send road shows all over the country to give employment to unemployed actors and actresses. Uncle Sam has entered nearly every other line of business and will go into show business to make his losses more certain.

• • • • •

It looks like a good break for authors. If they can't get any good offers from Hollywood they can always get a bid for the Washington rights.

• • • •

"Uncle Sam Presents" may become a familiar sign over the playhouses of America during the next few years.

• • • •

Costumes by Tugwell, hats by Gassoway, shoes by Frankfurter, and sound effects by Huey Long.

• • • •

Dances arranged and directed by the Senate Steering Committee. Lighting by Owen D. Young, mechanical effects by Pat Harrison, piano loaned by the Jeffersonian Club and wind instruments under the personal supervision of Jim Farley.

• • • •

The project is expected to be self-liquidating. If the show doesn't make any money the Government will get the scenery, props and costumes.

• • • •

Some federal affiliation with Cain's Storehouse is practically certain.

• • • •

The idea is noble in purpose, as no class of people are more thoroughly unemployed these days than actors, but the Democrats are taking terrific chances and had beter be careful about their casts and productions. The public will forgive anything but a bum show.

• • • •

And it is doubtful just how the actors will react to the administration after a year of overnight jumps among the tank towns of America. After a battle like that, they, too, may demand a bonus.

• • • •

Everything depends upon what shows Uncle Sam gets. If he lands a "Green Pastures" or a "Great Waltz" it may balance the budget.

• • • •

Our greatest fear is that a performance in some city will be held up for a week between the second and third acts while Congress debates the selection of a leading man to replace the one dismissed for having once accepted applause from Hoover.

Lyddane Hurt When He Dozes At Auto Wheel

Central Figure in 'Plot' Case Among 5 Injured in Accidents.

Five persons, one of them the central figure in the "Lyddane murder plot" case, were injured yesterday in auto accidents in nearby Maryland. Two of those injured are said to be in serious condition.

Francis S. Lyddane, of Rockville, said to be the intended victim of a murder conspiracy, received lacerations and bruises when the car he was driving ran off the Rockville-Frederick pike and hit a tree and a pole. Ralph Benson, also of Rockville, who was riding in Lyddane's car, also was slightly hurt. Lyddane told police he went to sleep while driving.

A collision on the Baltimore boulevard at Berwyn, Md., sent C. E. Rackley, of Wallace, N. C., to Sibley Hospital to be treated for head injuries.

Police said Rackley's truck collided with the rear of a parked interurban bus. B. J. Riverback, also of Wallace, N. C., a helper on the truck, was taken to Casualty Hospital with a possible skull fracture.

Justice of the Peace George S. Phillips, of Berwyn, issued a warrant for the arrest of Andrew Baremtine, 3 M street northwest, said to be a mechanic in charge of the bus. The warrant charged him with failing to park the vehicle as far as possible from the center of the road.

At approximately the same time, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Copsey, of Baltimore, were injured when their car left the Southern Maryland pike near Brandywine. They were treated for lacerations at Providence Hospital.
